INTRODUCTION.

THE aim of "Studies in the Apostolic Church" is to Aim.
enable those who use the book to master this portion of the Bible, and to impart such a knowledge of the life and work of the early disciples of our Lord as will lead to the highest Christian character and service.

The Bible is a book of life. It came from God The Bible and Life.
through life, and it goes back to life to lift that life Godward. "So shall my word be that goeth forth . . .
it shall not return unto me void." True Bible study is certain to produce a more abundant Christian life.

Always and first of all read the assigned Scripture First.
passage for the day, and seek to get out of it what God has therein for your own heart and mind. Even in the few cases where a somewhat extended passage is set for continuous reading, read at least some part of it as your first work with the lesson for that day. Use the daily memory verse and aim to memorize some of the other selected passages.

The Narrative for the First Day in each Study is The Narrative.
planned to give the essential facts, and to present the foremost New Testament thought in an interesting, readable form; while its Scripture quotations, in the exact words of the American Revision, still keep the reader in touch with the Word of God.

It is suggested that in personal study and in class- Map-Drawing.
work home-made maps should be used. It requires neither experience nor the ability of an artist to draw good maps and charts.

Each of the maps in the Studies has the lines crossing it forming sections that may be treated as squares. Simply note how many of these are required for any part of the Apostolic Church field which is to be drawn, and make the same number of squares or rectangular sections of such size as will cover the space to be used. Then draw the outlines of the map and locate places with reference to these lines or sections. For example, to draw a map of the northeastern part of the Mediterranean Sea, including the Island of Cyprus, it will only be necessary to draw two lines at right angles to each other, as is seen between Cyprus and the mainland, and then draw the coast line and the island with reference to these lines. In drawing Asia Minor (made up of the provinces marked Asia, Galatia, Cappadocia, etc.), and of Greece, marked Achaia, do not follow the smaller indentations of the coast line, but merely indicate the larger ones, and make the whole very simple, putting in only what is required, and entering few if any names.

Maps should be freely used in all class-work. These can be drawn on the blackboard; but since they will be useful in review work, it is suggested that they be drawn on large sheets of paper. Use the reverse side of a leaf cluster lesson roll, or five to ten sheets of manilla or printers' paper, fastened together at the top by narrow strips of wood, and acme crayon, or a red and blue pencil. Acme crayon, in assorted colors can be ordered of the Bureau of Bible Study, at 30 cents per dozen.

Many will find it most quickening and helpful to construct a Scripture Outline of the Apostolic Church period by arranging the material of Acts, Epistles, and Revelation in a notebook. Secure a notebook having good quality of paper, and bound as well as you can afford. A ten-cent book will do; but since you will value it highly when your work is finished, procure a substantial book if possible. Then purchase two inexpensive copies of the Revised Version of the New Testament. The nonpareil 32mo from the Oxford press, at ten cents, is recommended until the American Revision can be obtained in similar form.

Scripture Outline.

The OUTLINE on pages 11-15 will give the framework. The title of each Part and Study, both properly numbered, are to be entered as they are reached. Then taking the Scripture Outline found under Third Day in each Study, its several headings or sections including the Scripture reference are to be written in the notebook, under the title of the given Study, and the passages clipped from the New Testaments and pasted under these headings. When the Outline is complete, every verse of Acts, Epistles, and Revelation will have been clipped and pasted in the notebook, giving the analytical arrangement of the whole.

After each section of the Outline is made, leave ample space for notes, answers to questions, etc., before entering the number and title of the next Part or Study. The Bureau of Bible Study will send, prepaid, the Revised New Testament for study for 25 cents, the nonpareil 32mo for 10 cents, or two copies of the latter (for the Outline) with one copy of the former for 40 cents, or with one copy of the American Revised Bible, bourgeois, 8vo, for $1.10.

Morning Devotional Study. For many years the students of the colleges in all parts of the world have been pursuing courses of Bible study. They have tried all hours in the day, but it is the consensus of opinion that the best hour in the day is the morning hour, before breakfast, when the soul can spend the first half-hour of the day alone with God in personal, devotional Bible study and prayer.

Class Study. Nothing can take the place of private Bible study for personal spiritual growth, when the soul alone meets God face to face, nor can anything take the place of united Bible study at stated periods, when each member of a class adds his contribution to the lesson of the week, and when the enthusiasm of a united effort quickens the heart of the student.

It is suggested, therefore, that whenever possible a Bible study class be organized. The organization may be very simple, and the class need not be large. Some one (not necessarily the pastor) should be chosen leader. The leader need not be an authority on Bible study, but must be one who is willing to lead in hard work. Special helps to leaders of Bible-study classes, and valuable suggestions may be had free of charge by addressing the Bureau of Bible Study.

Bureau. The Bureau of Bible Study has been organized to answer questions, to facilitate the ordering of supplies, to prepare and send out helps to leaders, and to give direction to this work. All correspondence on Bible study should be addressed to the Bureau of Bible Study, 57 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Literature. It has been the purpose of the authors to provide Studies in the Apostolic Church which should be complete in themselves, requiring little or no outside help. In fact, the only book strictly needed for the course beyond the text-book, is a copy of the Revised New Testament or Bible. The first at twenty-five cents, or the second at one dollar, are in the best form for daily study. However, one or two good reference books will greatly assist the student.

[Except the Hastings Bible Dictionary (which can be obtained only from the publishers), all books referred to in this volume can be had of Jennings & Pye, Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City; or, Eaton & Mains, New York.]

Among these are:

An Oxford or an International Teachers' Bible, with its extensive "Helps" at the end of the volume. Price, $1.50 to $3.50.

Reference Library.

Many Young People's Societies now possess missionary libraries. Would it not be an excellent idea to add to these missionary books a Bible Study Reference Library, which would be found invaluable to individuals and classes pursuing this or similar courses of study? A circular suggesting a model Bible Study Reference Library will be furnished free of charge upon application to the Bureau of Bible Study, 57 Washington St., Chicago.

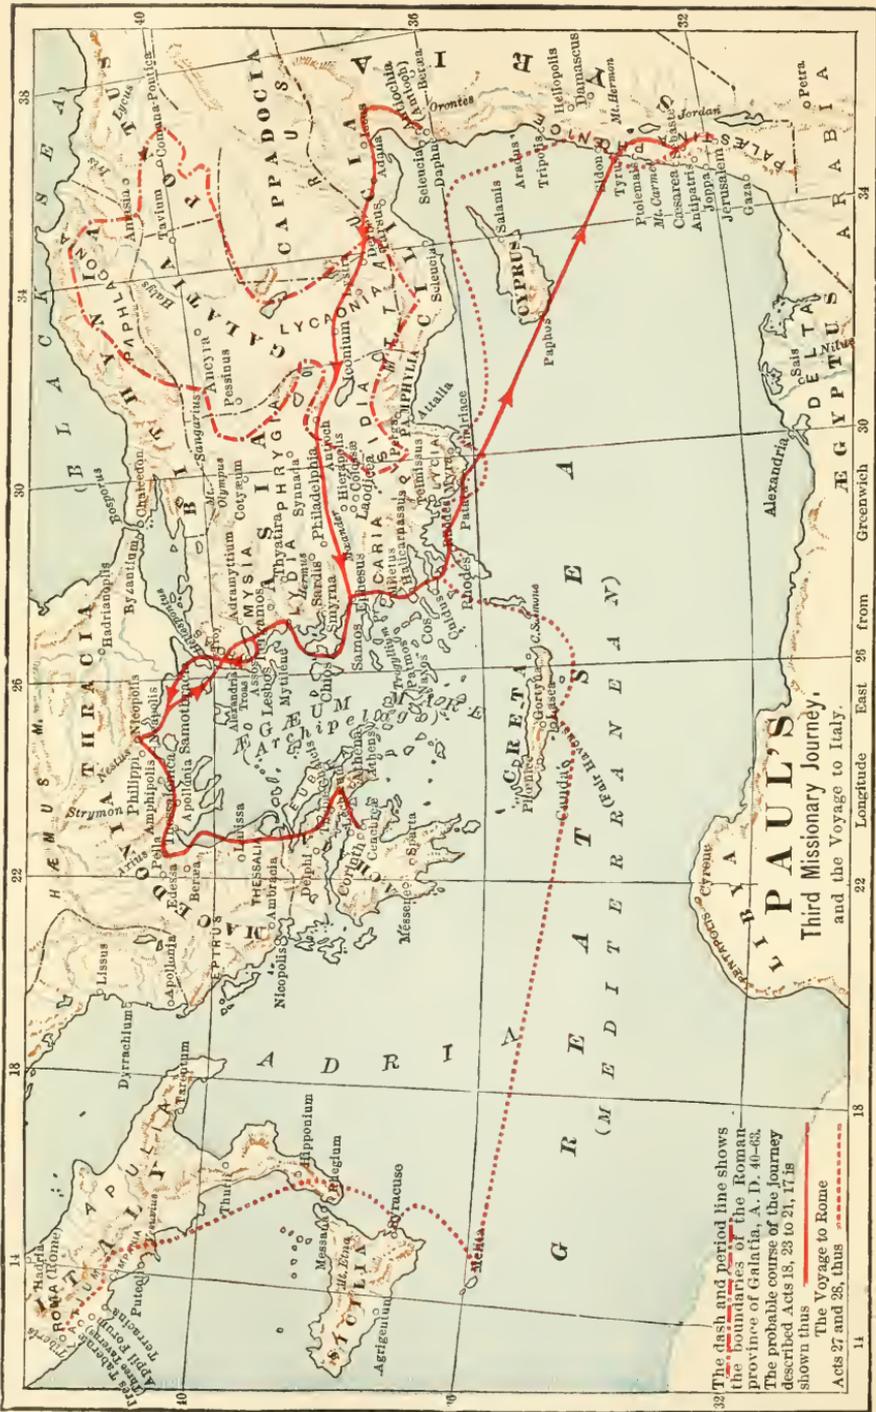

Story. To any student who may care to attempt the writing of the story of the Early Church, or the life of Paul or other apostolic leaders, we make the following suggestions:

Select a definite audience and propose to yourself a definite aim. These are some of the dedications that have been used in such work: "To a young college student who honors Christ but does not know him;" "To a skeptical friend;" "To an indifferent friend;" "To an uneducated man;" "To a little child;" "To my twelve-year-old brother."

"Paul of Tarsus," by Robert Bird, written in brief, bright sections, with picturesque titles and touches of description, forms an excellent model for such work, and the life of the apostle by Farrar or Stalker indicates how the choice of words and power of insight can impart a beauty and charm to every feature of these early scenes and their busy actors.

Acknowledgment.

In closing the Introduction, we wish to make special acknowledgment of our obligations to Professor R. H. Walker, of Delaware, Ohio, for his preparation of the postlude at the end of the Narrative in each Study, and to thank him and others for many helpful suggestions.

the writing of the Fourth Gospel.

"An account of the course which the criticism of the New Testament, and the consequent constructions of the history of the Apostolic Age have taken in modern times, would show that there has been a steady return on the part of most investigators towards the acceptance, in the main, of the dates to which tradition has assigned the origin of the books out of which apostolic history must be ascertained."

GEORGE T. PURVES.

"Luke had in view the great object to trace the gradual expansion of the Church from its first beginnings as a seeming phase of Judaism to its full development as a catholic communion, in which there was to be no distinction between Jew and Gentile, and where the law, on which the former prided himself so greatly, was to be superseded by the grace of God freely offered in the gospel."

J. A. MCCLYMONT.

"Great historians are the rarest of writers. By general consent the typical example of the highest class of historians is Thucydides, and it is doubtful whether any other writer would be, by general consent, ranked along with him. . . . While recognizing the risk, and the probable condemnation that awaits the rash attempt, I will venture to add to the number of the critics by stating in the following chapters reasons for placing the author of Acts among the historians of the first rank. . . . I shall argue that the book was composed by a personal friend and disciple of Paul, and if this be once established there will be no hesitation in accepting the primitive tradition that Luke was the author."

WILLIAM M. RAMSAY.

"It has been said of St. Paul that he is 'the man who has exerted the greatest influence on the history of the world;' a living point of connection between the three principal spheres of the time,—Jewish legality, Hellenic culture, and Roman citizenship. He could preach the gospel on the hill of Areopagus at Athens, and before the imperial tribunal at Rome, as well as in the midst of the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem."

FREDERIC GODET.

"Peter's early speeches, and Stephen's apology; the Epistles to the Galatians, the Romans, the Hebrews; the Johannine Epistles and Gospel—what are these but fingerposts in the pilgrimage by which the Apostolic Age entered more fully into the Gospel of Christ?"

JAMES VERNON BARTLET.

PART I.
THE CHURCH IN JERUSALEM.

FIRST WEEK.

THE COMING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

STUDY I.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts i, 4.

At the last supper our Lord said to his disciples, “I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever,” John xiv, 16; and again he said before his ascension, “Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you,” Acts i, 8. The Apostolic Church began with the fulfillment of these words. As the Gospels have made known to us the historic Christ manifest in the flesh, Acts, the Epistles, and Revelation will make known the living Christ manifest in the believer and the Church. And this will also be the work of the Spirit, since Christ said, “He shall bear witness of me . . . He shall glorify me: for he shall take of mine, and shall declare it unto you.” John xv, 26; xvi, 14.

Christ the Living Leader of the Church.

The progress from Christ's resurrection to the opening of the apostolic age is by steps most orderly and complete. The ascension assured his disciples that Christ was forever enthroned and possessed of all power. Luke rightly places Christ's last instructions and exaltation to heaven at the beginning of Acts. They complete the origin of Christianity, and form the introduction to apostolic history. Acts i, 1-11.

Approach to the Opening of the New Age.

- The Waiting Company. Among the first scenes of Luke's second work is the company of disciples, in number about one hundred and twenty, gathered in "the upper chamber" in obedience and prayer. There should be noted the eleven apostles, the women who have attended Christ, his mother, and, as a new group in the circle of faith, "his brethren." At the suggestion of Peter, Matthias is chosen by lot to take the place of Judas. The incident shows that Christ left the details of organization in the church to his disciples, with a large measure of liberty. Acts i, 12-26.
- Matthias Chosen.
- Pentecost. On the day of Pentecost the promised advent of the Holy Spirit occurred. This being one of the three great Jewish festivals, there came to Jerusalem Jews and proselytes "from every nation under heaven." It fell on the fiftieth day after the day of sheaf-waving, following Pass-over Sabbath,¹ and was a thanksgiving for the gathering of the harvest. According to tradition, it also commemorated the giving of the law. It was, therefore, a most fitting time for the gathering of a better harvest, and for the writing upon the hearts of thousands of a new and higher law. The Spirit revealed himself among the Christian company in their place of assembly, to the ear, by "a sound as of the rushing of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting;" and to the eye, by "tongues parting asunder, like as of fire; and it sat upon each one of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts ii, 1-4.
- The People Amazed. "And when this sound was heard, the multitude came together, . . . and they were all amazed . . . But others mocking said, They are filled with new wine."
- Peter's Sermon. But Peter, now prepared by the Spirit, stood forth and spoke to the multitude with such incisive and thrilling power, that three thousand were converted and baptized. Acts ii, 5-41.

Peter's sermon may be simply outlined as follows:

Sermon Outlined.

1. THE DISCIPLES ARE DEFENDED AGAINST THE MOCKING CHARGE OF DRUNKENNESS. Acts ii, 14, 15.
2. PENTECOST IS THE FULFILLMENT OF THE PROPHECY OF JOEL. Joel ii, 28-32; Acts ii, 16-21.
3. JESUS, WHOM THEY HAD CRUCIFIED, GOD HAD RAISED FROM THE DEAD. Acts ii, 22-24.
4. JESUS' RESURRECTION HAD BEEN PREDICTED BY DAVID, AND HAD BEEN WITNESSED BY THE DISCIPLES. Psalm xvi, 8-11; Acts ii, 25-32.
5. JESUS, EXALTED TO GOD'S RIGHT HAND, HAS SENT THE HOLY SPIRIT. Psalm cx, 1; Acts ii, 33-35.
6. CONCLUSION: JESUS IS THE MESSIAH AND LORD OF ALL. Acts ii, 36.

In the study of the Acts, we must remember that Luke expects a great deal of his reader. He never points the moral for us, and rarely states the inference he would have us make.

STUDY I.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts i, 8.

Read Acts i, 1-11. Luke, a physician and Gentile, perhaps of Philippi or Antioch, closely associated with St. Paul from about 50 A. D. to the close of the apostle's life, is the author of Acts, as well as the Gospel of Luke, to which he here refers as the "former treatise," verse 1. He addresses Theophilus, who is supposed to be a Roman official and a Christian. Bartlet 170, 410, 415; Rackham, xv-xxxvi. For further statement regarding Acts, see Study XXXI. Ver. 8 contains both a great promise and a suggestion of the means and course of the development of the Church.

STUDY I.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts i, 14.

Read Acts i, 12–14. Perhaps upon no body of Christians have so great interests ever depended as upon this waiting company. The power of concerted and continued prayer should be used more frequently by groups and companies of Christ's disciples.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

Draw a very simple map of the Roman Empire, and place upon lines radiating from Jerusalem the several names of Acts ii, 9–11, to show the directions from which the peoples have come. For Map, see Hurlbut, 98.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Preface, Acts i, 1, 2; Commission for witnessing, 3–8; Ascension, 9; Return promised, 10, 11; Meeting for prayer, 12, 14; Matthias chosen, 15–26; Advent of the Spirit, ii, 1–4; The people astonished, 5–13; The first sermon 14–36; The converts, 37–41.

STUDY I.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts i, 24.

Read Acts i, 14–26. This is the only instance of the lot being used in the Apostolic Church, and it comes between ascension and Pentecost, while the disciples are "orphans," John xiv, 18. There has been question of the divine choice of Matthias; but under the vivid light of the Spirit, we see him among "the eleven" other apostles who stood up with Peter when the new kingdom was inaugurated, Acts ii, 14. This should be conclusive as to God's approval. Paul's apostolate is of a different order from that of "the twelve," Acts vi, 2.

STUDY I.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Acts ii, 4.

Read Acts ii, 1–13. Augustine called Pentecost the "birthday" of the Holy Spirit. As Christ was existent before he became incarnate and was born at Bethlehem, so the Holy Spirit was existent and even present in the world before his definite advent at Pentecost. He now came in a peculiar way to dwell within believers and to act as the divine representative in the Church on earth. See "The Ministry of the Spirit," A. J. Gordon, chapter II.

Topics for Personal Investigation and for Assignment in Class-work.

1. The descent and dispensation of the Holy Spirit. Matt. iii, 11; John xvi, 7; Acts i, 5; ii, 1-4, 16-18, 33; xi, 15, 16.

2. Jerusalem, and its relation to the development of the Apostolic Church. C. H., I, 54-66; Matheson, 9, 10, 81, 82, 118; Hast. Bib. Dict., I, 421.

3. St. Luke as a man and writer. Ramsay, 1-28, 200-210, 386-390; Hast. Bib. Dict.

4. The Lord's brethren and their place in the church. Bartlet, 10, 11; 1 Cor., ix, 5.

5. Sketch of the countries and the people named in Acts ii, 9-11. Bib. Dict.; Cam. Bib., 17-19; Rackham, 22-24.

6. The Jews, Bartlet, xxi-xxx; C. H., I, 4-7, 16-19; Stalker, 73-75; Farrar (St. P.), 65, 76; Bib. Dict.

7. Proselytes of different classes. C. H., I, 18, 19; Ramsay, 43; Orr's "The Early Church," 5.

8. The nature of the speaking with other tongues, Acts ii, 4. Purves, secs. 33, 34; Bartlet, 11-14; Rackham, 19-21.

STUDY I.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Acts ii, 21.

Read Acts ii, 14-41. Notice that Peter's sermon, perhaps the most effective one ever preached, honors three things: The Scriptures, Christ, and the Holy Spirit. The Spirit can always use the written and the living Word in preparing men for the kingdom of God.

Questions for Written Answers.

1. What two books did Luke write?
2. To whom does he dedicate or address both writings?
3. Chiefly by what means is the kingdom of God to be extended?

4. Where was the work to begin?
5. What was to be its limit?
6. In what ways was the coming of the Holy Spirit manifested?
7. What terms are used by Joel to show the range of persons in whom the workings of the Spirit will be seen?
8. What is meant by being filled with the Holy Spirit, Acts ii, 4, and by receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit, Acts ii, 38? Are they two expressions for the same great privilege? See Study XII, Topic 1.

STUDY I.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Acts ii, 33.

Personal Thought.

“To you is the promise, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him.” Acts ii, 39.

Is there any limit to this promise? Am I conscious of the presence of the Holy Spirit in my life? Do I work with a power which cannot be explained on human grounds, or am I powerless to accomplish spiritual results? Can a spiritual work be done apart from the Holy Spirit? Have I received him?

PART I.—SECOND WEEK.

THE PRIMITIVE LIFE AND FELLOWSHIP.

STUDY II.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts ii, 42.

As a result of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, there appears as a fresh creation the primitive life and fellowship, pictured in the early chapters of Acts, where it alternates with accounts of the first currents of opposition to the new faith. The former will be presented in this Study, and the latter will be reserved until the next.

The New Creation.

That which is most noticeable at the birth of the Apostolic Church is an intense religious love and joy. This love was not a natural impulse, but had within it a new and exalted sense of the worth of human life as partaking in the life of God. Every soul is redeemed by the blood of Christ, and all who possess true faith are bound to Christ, who had lived in divine sympathy and lowly service among men, and in devotion to him was found the bond of brotherhood. Thus primitive Christianity arose directly from the life and death of Christ, and was simply Christ living again in every believer through the Spirit.

The Bond of Love.

The primitive Christians were still Jews, “continuing steadfastly with one accord in the temple,” . . . retaining their membership in the synagogues, “and having favor with all the people.” Acts ii, 46, 47; vi, 9. But while this is true, we discern at once a new element of their life, which finds its expression in complete fellowship, unity, and joy. “The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul. . . . And they continued steadfastly in the apostles’ teaching and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers. . . . They took their food with gladness and singleness of heart.”

Primitive Fellowship.

So all-controlling was their oneness of life that it soon resulted in a community of goods. "All that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all, according as any man had need . . . neither was there among them any that lacked." Acts ii, 42, 44-46; iv, 32, 34.

This feature was entirely spontaneous and free, and after it had served its purpose as an object-lesson, it passed away as quietly and without direction as it came.¹ A more permanent sign of unity was the holy supper, probably observed in the evening, at the close of a meal together.

Power of Miracles.

To the leaders of the primitive faith was given the power of miracles. "Fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles." Peter, with John, fastening his eyes upon the lame man at the temple gate, said, "Look on us . . . Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk. . . . And leaping up, he stood, and began to walk; and he entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. . . . All men glorified God for that which was done. For the man was more than forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was wrought. . . . They even carried out the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that, as Peter came by, at least his shadow might overshadow some one of them. And there also came together the multitude from the cities round about Jerusalem, bringing sick folk, and them that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one." Acts ii, 43; iii, 4-8; iv, 21, 22; v. 15, 16.

Growth. Under these conditions the primitive Church made steady and rapid progress. "The Lord added to them day by day those that were saved. . . . Many of them that heard the word believed; and the number of the men came to be about five thousand. . . . And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women. . . . And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem exceedingly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." Acts ii, 47; iv, 4; v. 14; vi, 7.

But in no stage of the church is the scene without a shadow. Judas appeared with Christ and the twelve; and the hypocrisy and fate of Ananias and Sapphira were at once a surprise and a warning to the primitive church. Acts v, 1-11.

Judgment on Hypocrisy.

Also it is not long before a difference, growing out of race feeling, threatened the harmony of the young church. "There arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. And the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, "It is not fit that we should forsake the word of God, and serve tables. Look ye out therefore, brethren, from among you seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will continue steadfastly in prayer, and in the ministry of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch: whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands upon them." Acts vi, 1-6.

Seven Helpers Chosen.

Every incident selected by the author of Acts for narration is regarded by him as representative, and stands for some new turning-point in the development of the Church.

STUDY II.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts iv, 33.

Read Acts ii, 42-47; iv, 32-37. In these passages five features in the life of the first Christians may be noted: 1. Instruction. This properly follows discipleship and baptism, according to Christ's words, Matt. xxviii, 19, 20. 2. Christian fellowship, than which nothing tends more fully to inspire the soul. 3. The Lord's Supper. 4. Prayer. 5. Community of goods.

STUDY II.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts v, 11.

Read Acts v, 1-11. The language of Peter, ver. 4, makes it plain that the devotion of one's property was a wholly voluntary matter, and that the divine judgment which Ananias and Sapphira called down upon themselves was entirely due to their own motives and actions. Verses 5 and 11 and ii, 43, show that there is a place for fear as well as love in Christianity. Note the first use in Acts of the term "church," ver. 11.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

Outline the northeastern shores of the Mediterranean Sea and the Island of Cyprus, the native place of Barnabas, and place Antioch in Syria, from which Nicolas, the last named of the seven helpers, came. See Map 1.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—The primitive church instructed, Acts ii, 42; vi, 2-4; Its fellowship, love, and worship, ii, 44-46; iii, 1; iv, 32-37; vi, 1: Its power to work miracles, ii, 43; iii, 2-10; v, 12-16; Its growth, ii, 47; vi, 7; Hypocrisy punished, v, 1-11; Seven helpers chosen, vi, 5, 6.

STUDY II.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts vi, 7.

Read Acts vi, 1-7. This passage is placed constructively after those of the two preceding days, because, like them, it bears upon the inner order and economy of the Church. It is remarkably full of light upon a wide range of points, and will repay most careful study.

STUDY II.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Acts v, 14.

Read Acts v, 12-16. The more general statement as to miracle-working is here given, with notice of its extension to cases brought from towns outside of Jerusalem.

Questions for Written Answers.

1. What expressions show that there was at first no break with the national worship?

2. What phrase probably means the Lord's Supper?

3. On which side of the Temple area was the Beautiful Gate?
4. What is a Levite, Acts iv, 36?
5. Who are meant by Grecian Jews, Acts vi, 1?
6. Give five reasons for the success of the primitive Church.

STUDY II.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Acts iv, 32.

Personal Thought.

“And day by day, continuing steadfastly with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread at home, they took their food with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved.” Acts ii, 46, 47.

Do the Christians of to-day enjoy the fellowship and brotherly love of the early Church? Was not this unity of spirit one of the secrets of the power of the early Church? Should anger, jealousy, pride, hypocrisy, or any of the causes of dissension have any place in my life? Is fault-finding worthy of a Christian?

Read Phil. ii, 2-11.

PART I.—THIRD WEEK.

THE FIRST WAVES OF PERSECUTION.

STUDY III.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts v, 29.

“I came not to send peace, but a sword. . . . If they persecuted me, they will also persecute you. . . . New wine must be put into fresh wine-skins.” These sayings of Christ revealed the certainty that the peaceful relations of the primitive Church with Judaism could not continue.¹ Though the disciples were Jewish in their adhesion to synagogue and temple and devotion to prayers, they were also fervent in preaching Jesus and the resurrection. At first they were borne with by the Jewish leaders, as forming merely one more sect, perhaps in common thought resembling the Essenes.² But soon a radical difference was manifest. These other Jewish religionists lived in the main quietly at a distance from Jerusalem, but the Christians lived in the capital itself, and soon began to stir the city profoundly by public discourses and miracles.

If A New Spiritual Force.

The first signs of friction came when Peter preached the sermon recorded in Acts iii, 11-26, in Solomon's porch, after the healing of the lame man, as given in the last lesson. Very naturally the first note of alarm arose from the Sadducean national officeholders. “And as they spake unto the people, the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadducees came upon them, being sore troubled because they taught the people, and proclaimed in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. And they laid hands on them, and put them in ward unto the morrow.” Acts iv, 1-3.

Sadducees Alarmed. First Arrest.

When they appeared before the Sanhedrin the next day, the rulers were astonished at their bold defense, Bold Defense and Release.

² Bartlet, 20, 222.

since they recognized that they were "unlearned and ignorant men . . . and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." But as the man who was healed stood with them, it was not easy to visit punishment upon them, and after they were threatened they were discharged. Acts iv, 5-22.

Prayer Meeting. Realizing that a more severe crisis of opposition was at hand, the apostles returned to their company and held a prayer meeting. God answered with power, and "the place was shaken wherein they were gathered together; and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit." Thus encouraged, they went on confidently with their public work. Acts iv, 23-31.

Sadducees Again Jealous. Second Arrest. The next occasion of jealousy on the part of the rulers was the large increase of miracle working, as noted in the previous lesson. The people began to come for healing from the towns about Jerusalem; and the alarm caused by the sudden popularity of the new sect led to the second arrest and imprisonment, this time of all the apostles. Once more they were assured of divine watch-care, for "an angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them out, and said, Go ye, and stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this Life. And when they heard this, they entered into the temple about daybreak, and taught." Presently, before the Sanhedrin, Peter and the other apostles still more pointedly asserted the guilt of the rulers in the death of Christ; and they would doubtless have been killed had not the Pharisee, Gamaliel, reputed to be a grandson of the mild Hillel, advised submission of the issue to the decision of Providence. "To him they agreed," and the apostles were beaten, released, and resumed their gospel labors. So closed the first two impulses of persecution, which had been chiefly due to the Sadducees. Acts v, 17-42.

Pharisees and People Aroused. The third and more violent wave of persecution came rather from the Pharisees and the people inflamed against Stephen because of alleged utterances concerning the temple and the law. There is no clear proof that Stephen had made such statements as were attributed to him. But it is probable that in the synagogue of the Cilicians and Asians,¹ of which the young Cilician, Saul, may have been a member, Stephen had been more than a match for those who argued against the truth of the gospel. Acts vi, 8, 9.

“They were not able to withstand the wisdom and the Spirit by which he spake,” and when he was arraigned before the Sanhedrin, “all that sat in the council, fastening their eyes on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.” Acts vi, 9, 10, 15. Stephen’s fervid historical and prophetic address shows that he had grasped much of the inner spirit of Christ’s message to the nation, and when, at the close, he thrust home the fact that the leaders of Israel “received the law as it was ordained by angels, and kept it not,” Acts vii, 53, his judges would not listen to another word. In a tumult, without form of law or observance of the bounds of their power under Roman rule, they hurried him out of the city and stoned him to death. Acts vi, 10—vii, 58.

Stephen’s Trial.

The example of the first martyr has ever been an inspiration to the Church. His glowing face and expiring prayer smote the heart of young Saul, and probably determined his conversion. After Stephen “fell asleep” persecution burst forth against the whole Church. The apostles remained in Jerusalem, but that city was no longer the exclusive field of the new faith. With the record of its extension beyond the bounds of Jerusalem, the second period of the course begins. Acts vii, 59, 60; viii, 2.

The First Martyr.

To the student of no book of the New Testament is the command, “He that hath ears to hear, let him hear,” more applicable than to the students of this simple and easy narrative of the Acts.

STUDY III.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts iii, 19.

Read Acts iii, 11–26. This sermon of Peter's, as well as that on the day of Pentecost, is very important as revealing the simple, primitive form of the first missionary preaching. There could not be a better evidence that the record is genuine, than is given by what these early discourses do not say, as well as the things which they do contain.

See Purves, secs. 45–48; Adeney, 120–130.

STUDY III.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts iv, 13.

Read Acts iv, 1–31. Note particularly, ver. 5, 6, that the high-priestly family, who are known to be Sadducees, and who were the first to check the apostles, are the same ones who most bitterly opposed Christ. Note also the boldness or courage given by prayer and the presence of Jesus through the Spirit. Ver. 13, 29, 31.

STUDY III—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts v, 42.

Read Acts v, 17–42. The popularity of the apostles, because of their healing power, aroused the "jealousy" of the proud, official Sadducees, ver. 17. The early Christians also learned that the success of their cause required them to be fearless "witnesses," ver. 32.

Read Acts vi, 8-15. "What an impetuous power this Galahad of the cross must have had! It is hard to think of him as otherwise than young, with all the glad bravery and faith of youth shining from his eyes. But his force was not unbalanced violence. His speech before the Sanhedrin gives the impression of self-restraint and quiet power. . . . There is a blending of strength and sweetness of impetuosity and gentleness in Stephen that is strangely touching." Rauschenbusch.

STUDY III.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Acts vii, 35.

Read Acts vii, 1—viii, 1. Seek to grasp the breadth of Stephen's view of Hebrew history. God has produced progress by changes and through deliverers whom the people had often first rejected. Therefore the change to Christ, "the Righteous One," ver. 52, whom Moses himself had foretold, and whom God would make their final deliverer, ver. 35-37, would be to follow the divine order. This his conclusion was cut short by their burst of wrath; but he stands in the succession of the prophets and of his Master. Stevens, 272, 273.

PART II.

THE CHURCH SPREADING THROUGH PAL- ESTINE AND ADJACENT PARTS OF ASIA, AND INSTRUCTED BY JAMES.

FOURTH WEEK.

THE JUDAIC FIELD EXPANDING—HEROD AGRIPPA I, AND HIS DEATH.

STUDY IV.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts viii, 4.

The primitive Church has already begun to respond to influences which will make it too broad for the limits of Judaism. This movement of expansion had its first beginnings in the choice of the "seven men," Acts vi, 1-6. They all have Greek names, and "Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch," shows that the Church was ready to make one who was not a Jew an office-bearer. Stephen, by his grasp of the spiritual purpose of Christianity, gave a further impulse in this direction, and the persecution which arose after his death scattered the Church, and carried the seeds of gospel truth over a wide field. The Church Expanding.

Two points are to be kept in mind: first, the Church is still Judaic—that is, composed of Jews and proselytes—and it largely continues to be so during the time covered by Part II. Second, it is steadily moving by constant, though gradual steps, toward Gentile inclusion, which is the goal to be reached.¹ In this and the next lesson the Judaic side of the Church life during the whole period will be treated. Then, in Studies VI and VII, the preparation for the great Gentile development related in Part III, will be given. The Gentile Goal.

¹See Orr's "Early Church," 16, 17.

Disciples Scattered Abroad.

Following Stephen's death, "there arose a great persecution against the Church which was in Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, . . . and went about preaching the word." And some "traveled as far as Phœnicia, and Cyprus, and Antioch, speaking the word to none save only to Jews." Acts viii, 1, 4; xi, 19. The general outline is first given, and then particular fields and workers are taken up.

Phillip's Work at Samaria.

One of the seven, Philip, "went down to the city of Samaria, and proclaimed unto them the Christ." His ministry of the word was accompanied by curing the sick and the lame, and casting out "unclean spirits." Multitudes believed, "and there was much joy in that city." Simon, a famous sorcerer, gave his adhesion to Philip's preaching, and was baptized. Acts viii, 5-13.

Visit of Peter and John.

When the apostles at Jerusalem heard of this work of grace, they sent Peter and John, "who, when they were come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit. . . . Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit." "They had been baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." Simon sought to purchase the power of bestowing the Spirit, but was sharply rebuked by Peter, who used the words, "I see that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity," ver. 23, which seem to show that Simon was not a true believer. After preaching the gospel to many villages of the Samaritans, the two apostles returned to Jerusalem. Acts viii, 14-25.

Phillip and the Ethiopian Treasurer.

Philip was next directed to go toward the south, and on the road toward Gaza had the memorable interview with "a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians." He was the queen's treasurer, probably a Jewish proselyte, and had been to Jerusalem to worship, and, when joined by Philip, was reading the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. He was guided to immediate faith in Christ, baptized, "and went on his way rejoicing." Philip's farther course was through the coast cities from Azotus to Cæsarea, where he seems to have settled. Acts viii, 26—40; xxi, 8.

Peter did similar evangelizing work during this period and in almost the same region as that last named, before he was led to preach to Gentiles. This was after the persecution by Saul had closed, and "the Church throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria had peace, being edified; and, walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit, was multiplied." At Lydda Peter healed Æneas, who was palsied, and many at that place and throughout Sharon "turned to the Lord." At Joppa he raised to life Tabitha or Dorcas, and there also "many believed on the Lord." Afterward Peter remained at Joppa for a time with Simon a tanner. Acts ix, 31—43.

Peter at
Joppa.

Toward the close of this period a second persecution broke out against the Church in Jerusalem through Herod Agrippa I, who "killed James the brother of John with a sword. And when he saw that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to seize Peter also." Through the prayers of the Church, Peter was delivered by an angel out of the prison; and soon after the king was smitten and died in agony. "But the word of God grew and multiplied." Acts xii, 1—24.

Herod's Opposition and Death.

Luke's is the modest art that hides itself, and to appreciate his work we must contemplate it long and faithfully, as one scans an old masterpiece.

STUDY IV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts viii, 8.

Read Acts viii, 1, 4—25; xii, 19. Note the surprising promptness with which the Jewish Christians come into touch with the people of Samaria, in contrast with their distance from each other during Christ's ministry. The Samaritans would easily welcome those whom Jerusalem rejected, and the bestowal of the Spirit through the agency of the two apostolic delegates would cement the bond between Samaritan and Jewish believers.

STUDY IV.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts viii, 35.

Read Acts viii, 26-40. This passage is full of delightfully practical points. In ver. 29, 30 is one on instant obedience: "The Spirit said, Go . . . and Philip ran." Find many others.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

One excellent line of map work would be to unfold the stages indicated by Judea, Samaria, Galilee, Phœnicia, Antioch, Cyprus, all to the northward, and coming within the scope of this lesson. Another would be to trace the course of Philip.

STUDY IV.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts ix, 31.

Read Acts ix, 31-43. Note that the Christian movement appears to be well established in this region before Peter's visit. But, as Purves remarks, p. 67, "The movement as yet was strictly a Hebrew one."

Read Acts xii, 1-17. Herod Agrippa I, grandson of Herod the Great, after several extensions of the region over which he bore rule, by the addition through the Emperor Claudius of Judea and Samaria, in 41 A. D., governed the same territory as his famous grandfather. It is in accord with his known character, that, to please the unbelieving Jews, he should persecute the Christians. This occurred near the close of his brief reign, over Judea, of three years, and seems to have been confined to Jerusalem.

Personal Thought.

"Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." Acts viii, 4, A. V.

The storms of persecution which scattered the early Christians were intended to sweep this new sect from the face of the earth. They proved to be the winds which scattered the seed.

May not many of the things which seem to me to be hardships, or which seem to be subversive of the will of God, be His way of preparing for the harvest? Could any greater blessing have come to the early Church than the persecutions which purified it and were the means of extending it throughout the world?

PART II.—FIFTH WEEK.

JAMES, THE LORD'S BROTHER, AND HIS SEARCHING LETTER.

STUDY V.—First Day. Memory Verse, James i, 27.

The Epistle of James is ascribed by nearly all writers to James, the brother of our Lord, and there is a strong tendency to date the letter between 40 and 50 A. D. It thus becomes the earliest writing in the New Testament. Although James and the others named in Mark vi, 3, Joses, Judas, and Simon were doubtless own brothers of Jesus, growing up together with him in the home at Nazareth, the Gospels show that they did not believe in him as the Messiah till after his resurrection, and it was, perhaps, Christ's appearance to James which convinced him. John vii, 5; 1 Cor. xv, 7; Acts i, 14.

Author and Date.

He is first mentioned in Acts after the death of James the son of Zebedee and Peter's deliverance out of prison, as recounted in the last lesson. The circumstances show that he was already a person of distinction among the disciples. When Peter, for safety, retired from the city, he requested that word be given "unto James, and to the brethren," Acts xii, 17. From this point onward James appears to hold a position of great importance, so that he has been called the Bishop of Jerusalem, though it is probable that his power was personal rather than official. He presides at the council which is held there about 50 A. D., after Paul's first missionary journey, to determine the status of the Gentile converts, makes the decisive speech, and prepares the form of the decree which is sent forth. Again, about eight years later, at the close of Paul's third missionary journey, James is still the head of the Jerusalem Church, and gives the apostle counsel, which was well intended, but resulted in the fierce attack made upon him by the unbelieving Jews. See Studies IX and XIX. Tradition says that James was a Nazarite, and, though a Christian, retained a remarkable reputation with all the Jews for sanctity and devotion to prayer; that he never left Jerusalem, but died there as a martyr, in the year 62 or 63 A. D., through the opposition of the last of the high-priestly sons of Annas or Hanan.

Relation with Christ.

Great interest attaches to the character of James because of his relation with the Lord Jesus. Says Mayer: "The constant intercourse with Him who was full of grace and truth in childhood as in manhood, must have prepared James to find in the Ten Commandments no mere outward regulations, but an inner law of liberty and love written in the heart. That deep interest in the mysteries of the kingdom, that earnest search after truth which led the child Jesus to remain behind in the temple, must surely have had its effect upon his brother." It is noticeable how fond both James and Jude are of figures of speech, as was Jesus, and in the Epistle of James there are more echoes of the words of Christ than can be traced through the whole range of the other New Testament epistles. Especially can we see in it the reflection of the thoughts of the Sermon on the Mount. "We feel that he has his eye ever on his Holy Brother as he writes."

Lofty Moral Standard.

One is also impressed with the lofty moral ideal of James. All that is best in Judaism seems to find a voice in him. Now he speaks with the tone of Moses the law-giver; again we might fancy we were in the presence of one of the Hebrew prophets, like Elijah, Isaiah, or Micah; and anon are heard the quiet strains of the wisdom books of the Old Testament.

Situation for the Letter.

According to Bartlet, "We have an excellent situation for the Epistle of James, if we imagine it sent forth with believing Jews as they returned from the Passover any time between 44 and 49 A. D. . . . The constant flow of pilgrims to Jerusalem, especially to the great feasts, would make him familiar with the actual conditions of life and the besetting sins of his brethren of the Dispersion; and there would be sufficient similarity of conditions in Jewish communities everywhere to make his own experience in Palestine a fair point of departure."

The epistle is extremely practical and searching. It does not follow a logical order, but takes up theme after theme, and goes directly to the heart of each new topic, treating it in the plainest and most straightforward manner, and then enforcing it with vivid phrases, rapid questions, and graphic comparisons. The style has been compared to that of a fiery prophetic oration rather than that of a letter. Among its leading ideas are temptation and the course of sin which starts in the desires and the will and ends in spiritual death; the evil world as set over against God as the Father of lights; pure religion, practical goodness, wisdom, patience, humility, purity; the control of the tongue; the rebuke of pride, boasting, sensuous pleasures, injustice; confession of sin, prayer, and efforts to save the wayward. Among its most celebrated contrasts is that between hearing and doing, and between a faith that is a mere profession and a genuine faith shown by good works. James i, 22-25; ii, 14-26.

Qualities and Leading Ideas.

Read the epistle through at a sitting and note your first impressions. For those who are familiar with a Pauline epistle it would be wise to note down the contrasts between James and Paul, both in content and style.

STUDY V.—Second Day. Memory Verse, James i, 25.

Read James i. Though Christ is directly alluded to only twice in the epistle, i, 1; ii, 1, note that James at the outset makes him coequal with God in honor and terms himself a "bondservant" of both. Those to whom he writes are primarily Christian Jews, but just beyond them he doubtless has in mind the whole of unconverted Israel. The chapter is filled with gems of thought and phrase.

STUDY V.—Third Day. Memory Verse, James ii, 26.

Read James ii. The primitive Church conditions are to be noted in the fact that the place of assembly of Christians is still called a "synagogue," ii, 2. Substantially all writers now hold that James and Paul agree. "James insists that a dead faith—a mere holding of things for true—can not save. . . . There is not a word in Paul's writings contrary to this position. . . . When Paul declares that men are not saved by 'works,' he means that they are not saved by deeds of obedience to the Mosaic law considered as so inherently meritorious that they can found a claim to salvation. . . . There is not a word in the Epistle of James which is in the least inconsistent with this doctrine." Stevens, 291. The key to the harmony of the two is this: James uses the terms "faith apart from works" and "works" in a different sense from the meaning of the terms "faith" and "works" with Paul.

THE PREPARATION OF PAUL.

STUDY VI.—First Day. Memory Verse, Phil. iii, 7.

Having in the last two Studies followed the Jewish Preparation of Paul. side of early Church development till about the year 44 A. D., the course now turns back and rapidly traces the beginning of the activities that were destined to reach the Gentile world.

The new line of study naturally begins with the preparation of the Apostle Paul. The great apostle was a native of Tarsus, the free, capital city of Cilicia, on the river Cydnus. The family may have been settled there as a part of a Jewish colony, under one of the Syrian kings, with the gift of municipal citizenship. How Paul's Roman citizenship was obtained is not known, but by descent he was both a Tarsian and a Roman citizen.¹ Acts xxi, 39; xxii, 25-29. It is probable that he was born about 3 A. D.² He was a Hebrew sprung from Hebrews, his training was strictly Jewish, his settled adherence was given to the Pharisees, and the temper of his mind and style of thought became and remained rabbinic. The large Græco-Roman city of his birth and early years, with its political and educational renown, its commerce and commingling of peoples, profoundly influenced him. Probably at Tarsus he inherited with his Roman citizenship the name Paul, Saul being his Jewish name. His boyhood in the city added to his command of Hebrew a ready use of the Greek of the Levantine shores. The life of the city colored all his mental imagery with the associations of men and towns, rather than those of nature. Its oratorical schools probably did much to form his modes of expression as a speaker and writer,¹ and its industries dowered him with his trade of tent-making. The environment of young Saul at Tarsus and his Roman citizenship made him cosmopolitan, gave him his grasp of the elements of Roman law and government, the large outlook on affairs, the courtesy, dignity and confidence, by which the Jewish scholar was at the same time the Roman gentleman.

Education at Jerusalem. All the circumstances would indicate that Paul's family was one of wealth. Probably at the age of twelve he was sent to Jerusalem, and there began his more special education as a Jewish teacher or theologian under the eminent Rabban Gamaliel. Yet it is not likely that he was at the capital at the time of the visits of Christ or the crucifixion.

Struggle after Righteousness. Possessing a nature of almost unparalleled depth and intensity, Saul no sooner gained a knowledge of religious principles than he carried them out to their logical conclusions, and sought to transmute truth and duty into life. His profound struggle after righteousness through the law is depicted in the seventh chapter of Romans, and constituted a negative preparation, not only for his conversion, but also for the part he was to take in establishing the sufficiency of the Gospel and faith over against the law and works.²

Zeal as a Persecutor. The part which the young man Saul took in the trial and death of Stephen, and his prominence in opposing the Christian movement, prove his remarkable capacity for leadership, and his desperate zeal as a persecutor proclaims his clear grasp of the fact that Christianity meant the total overthrow of Jewish legalism.³ It also shows that he had not found peace nor inward victory.

Conversion. His conversion marks one of the great epochs of the Christian faith. Perhaps no one event after the crucifixion and Pentecost has ever meant so much to the Christian world. There are things about it that still are mysteries. What led to it? Was it Stephen's last prayer? The heavenly light on the martyr's face? The terrible inner struggle and sense of failure? Meditation in the long ride to Damascus? A flash-light picture through the Holy Spirit of the hateful fury that had filled his heart? Probably it was all these, leading up to the revelation of the living Christ in his divine glory, saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Acts ix, 4. He was "not disobedient unto the heavenly vision," or appearance of Christ and the call to service, but said, "What shall I do, Lord?" Acts xxvi, 19; xxii, 10. Not long after, at the word of Ananias, a devout disciple of Damascus, his sight was restored and he was baptized.

The other steps of preparation must be rapidly passed over. At his conversion, God "revealed his Son" in him. Gal. i, 16. His Christian state and beliefs quickly developed; but three years were spent in Arabia, Gal. i, 17, during which all that was involved in his new faith doubtless came into clear light. He preached in Damascus both before and after this Arabian sojourn, met Barnabas, Peter, and James at Jerusalem, and after a brief work there, went to Tarsus, and spent the next eight or ten years in Cilicia, probably in quiet labors in the synagogues in a ministry chiefly Judaic, such as was described in Study IV, Acts ix, 19-30; Gal. i, 18-24, though the beginnings of his Gentile service may also have considerable place during this time. Ramsay, 46, 47, 62; Purves, sec. 97.

Later Steps of Preparation.

In your subsequent study of the life, and especially of the epistles, of Paul, keep in mind this question: If the Scriptures did not tell me that at the beginning of his career Paul received a very unusual manifestation from the risen Christ, would not the facts of his subsequent life compel me to make that assumption?

STUDY VI.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxiii, 8.

Read Phil. iii, 4-7; Acts xxiii, 6-8. Note that the first passage sums up the points in which Paul might take pride as an orthodox Jew, and declares them of no worth compared with the knowledge of Christ. The second passage shows that the apostle's doctrinal views continued to be those of the Pharisees respecting the resurrection.

STUDY VI.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxvi, 9.

Read Acts vi, 9; vii, 58; viii, 1, 3; ix, 1, 2; xxvi, 9-11. In these brief passages may be traced Saul's course of opposition to the Christian Way. The start was probably in the synagogue of the Cilicians and Asians at Jerusalem in debate with Stephen.

6. Into what part of Arabia is it probable that he retired?

STUDY VI.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Gal. i, 24.

Carefully review the entire preparation of Paul from his birth till the close of his preliminary ministry in Cilicia. For a popular, accurate, and lifelike story of this period of his life see "Paul of Tarsus," by Robert Bird, 1-178.

Personal Thought.

"Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience void of offense toward God and men always." Acts xxiv, 16.

Is not this one of the secrets of Paul's power? He was once very much in the wrong, and even consented to the death of the martyr Stephen; but he thought he was in the right. When he found out that he was in error he did all within his power to atone for it.

Have I this attitude of mind? Am I honestly seeking to know and do the will of God?

PART II.—SEVENTH WEEK.

FIRST GENTILE CONVERTS—ANTIOCH A NEW CENTER.

STUDY VII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts x, 2.

The first Gentiles to come into the Apostolic Church, without having previously received the rites of Judaism, had the door opened to them by Peter, and not by Paul. Even though Paul might have evangelized Gentiles in Cilicia at an earlier date, the conditions were not such as to call attention to them as a test case. To Peter had been assigned by Christ the privilege of opening the new kingdom, both for the Jews and Gentiles. Matt. xvi, 18, 19. This he did for the former on the day of Pentecost, and he now does it for the latter, as is related with such care in the tenth chapter of Acts. The precedent of Peter, the leading apostle of the twelve, under the immediate direction of the Holy Spirit, as first officially baptizing and having fellowship with Gentile converts, would be of immense value to Paul in the difficult mission that lay before him as the apostle of the Gentiles.

Peter's Official Action.

It should also be noted by what gradual stages of advance the new field is entered. Peter is first shown as being so far free from Jewish rules and prejudice that he abides "many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner," Acts ix, 43. Next, Cornelius, to whom Peter is to go, though from Italy, and by blood purely a Gentile, is "a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, who gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always," Acts x, 1, 2. Ramsay, pp. 42, 43, shows that Cornelius thus belonged to "the God-fearing proselytes," or proselytes of the Gate, something quite different from Gentiles who had entered into no relations with the Jews, and says, concerning Peter's action, "This step, though an important one, was only the first stage in a long advance that was still to be made." This may also explain why the step taken by Peter is by no means decisive of the whole question with the Jewish Christians.

The Gradual Advance.

Cornelius and those with him converted.

The narrative of Acts relates how an angel appeared to Cornelius, a centurion of the Italian band or cohort at Cæsarea, and directed him to send for Peter at Joppa. While the men were coming from Cornelius, Peter had a thrice-given vision, as he was in prayer upon the flat roof of Simon's house, which prepared him to go with them. Upon arrival at the house of Cornelius, Peter preached to him and "his kinsmen and near friends," who had been called together, and "the Holy Spirit fell on all them that heard the word. And they of the circumcision were amazed, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Spirit. For they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God. Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid the water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days." Acts x, 17-48.

Peter's Course Approved.

The news of this remarkable occurrence soon reached the apostles and brethren of Judea, and when Peter returned to Jerusalem, "they that were of the circumcision contended with him, saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. But Peter began and expounded the matter unto them in order," and concluded with these words, "If then God gave unto them the like gift as he did also unto us, when we believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I, that I could withstand God? And when they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying,

Then to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life." Acts xi, 1-18.

There is next given the account of a saving work among the Gentiles of Antioch, the capital of Syria-Cilicia, situated on the Orontes River, three hundred miles north of Jerusalem. Here again the beginnings of the movement may have antedated the conversion of Cornelius, but its full import now appears, for it goes beyond that example, because those who are in no sense proselytes to Judaism have now become converts. The Jerusalem Church sent Barnabas to inspect the work, and when it continued to enlarge, he went to Tarsus and secured the help of Paul. "And it came to pass, that even for a whole year they were gathered together with the Church, and taught much people; and that the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." Later, during the famine in the reign of Claudius, the Antiochian Church sent relief to their fellow disciples in Judea by Barnabas and Paul, who returned accompanied by John Mark. Acts xi, 19-30; xii, 25. Antioch, a city of half a million people, after Rome and Alexandria the third in size in the empire, now becomes Christianity's new center, the natural vantage point and gateway of the new faith in its progress toward Asia Minor and the West.

Gentile work at Antioch.

A visit of Paul to Jerusalem, possibly coming within this lesson, is that given in Gal. ii, 1-10. Bartlet, 52-60, regards this as a private visit of Paul before the famine, that he may confer with the "pillar apostles" in view of the wonderful revelation he has received, 2 Cor. xii, 2-5, of God's purpose concerning the Gentiles. Ramsay, 5, 55-64, identifies it with the famine visit; while the traditional view, presented by Purves, secs. 116, 148-154, makes it the more private side of the Jerusalem council recorded in Acts xv. Bartlet would also place the visit of Peter to Antioch, Gal. ii, 11-21, after the famine visit and before the first missionary journey.

When did Paul visit Jerusalem, and Peter Antioch?

It would be an excellent plan to study this lesson as would an artist employed to illustrate it. Picture to yourselves the plain fisherman as he goes into the stately military headquarters between the saluting sentinels.

Verse 35 probably means that the Gentile of any nation or race, having these qualities, is acceptable in God's sight to hear the gospel unto salvation. STUDY VII.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xi, 18.

Read Acts xi, 1-18. Note that the great difference which is to agitate the Apostolic Church for years here emerges—the relations of Jewish and Gentile Christians, as affected by circumcision. In verse 18 the whole case for Gentiles seems to be conceded, but it is probable that by many this was regarded as a special instance, and not as establishing a general principle.

Questions for Written Answers.

1. What gave Cæsarea prominence at this time ?
2. Who are meant by "the people," Acts x, 2 ?
3. By what standard was the action stated in ver. 28 "unlawful?"
4. Why did the Holy Spirit come upon Cornelius and his company before their baptism, ver. 44-48 ?
5. Can you see a reason why the men of Cyprus and Cyrene would be better fitted to begin the work at Antioch than Palestinian Christians ?
6. Who are included in the term "Greeks," xi, 20 ?
7. Why was it well for Barnabas and Paul to be the workers at Antioch ?

STUDY VII.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Acts xi, 23.

Carefully review Part II, and broadly grasp Parts I and II as a whole, as they form a preparation for the coming great period of expansion. Weigh, as chapter-names for Acts viii-xii, the following, entering them or your own choice of names in your notebook: 8. Philip; 9. Saul; 10. Cornelius; 11. Peter Approved; 12. Herod.

Personal Thought.

"When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life." Acts xi, 18.

What is my attitude toward men who are not of my way of thinking, or who are of another nationality ? Do I fully realize that the heathen in China or Africa have also been granted "repentance unto life," and that I am as much bound to give the gospel to them as were the early Christians to give the gospel unto the Gentiles ?

Are there any Gentiles, so far as my life and conduct are concerned ?

THE CHURCH EXTENDED BY PAUL INTO ASIA MINOR.

EIGHTH WEEK.

PAUL'S FIRST MISSIONARY JOURNEY—CYPRUS AND GALATIA—RETURN TO ANTIOCH.

STUDY VIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, 2 Tim. iii, 11.

The opening of this period in the Apostolic Church receives large emphasis in Luke's record. With chapter thirteen the Book of Acts may be said to take a fresh start,¹ and the missionary enterprise of the Church shows new power. The Antiochian Church is seen to be enriched by the gifts of the Spirit to its leaders, and of these five are named: "Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen the foster-brother of Herod the tetrarch, and Saul. And as they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Spirit said: Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. Then, when they had fasted and prayed and laid their hands on them, they sent them away." Acts xiii, 1-3.

sion Begun.

Going down to Seleucia, the harbor of Antioch, they took ship for Cyprus, probably in the spring of 47 A. D.² The course from Seleucia to Salamis, the principal city of the island, was about one hundred miles southwest. Cyprus was the birthplace of Barnabas, had early received Jewish heralds of Christ after Stephen's death, and had furnished some of those who began the Gentile work at Antioch. It thus presented a favorable field for the first missionary labors of Barnabas and Saul. "And when they were at Salamis, they proclaimed the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John as their attendant. Next, passing through the whole island to Paphos, the seat of government, they found with Sergius Paulus, the Roman proconsul, a Jewish sorcerer, named Bar-Jesus or Elymas, who presently sought to turn the governor away from the faith. At this point a momentous step was taken by one of the missionaries. "Saul, who is also called Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit, fastened his eyes on" the sorcerer, and declared the divine visitation of blindness, which at once came upon him. "Then the proconsul, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the teaching of the Lord." Acts xiii, 4-12. "When Paul came thus forward under his new aspect and personality, he was inaugurating a new policy. He was appealing direct, for the first time, to the Græco-Roman world as himself a member of that world. . . . The historian fixes the moment precisely at the point where the apostles faced the Magian in the presence of the proconsul of Cyprus. Amid the conflict of the two religions before the Roman governor, Paul stepped forward in his character of citizen of the empire; and his act was followed by the transport of power, which attested the grace that was given to the bold innovator, and the divine approval and confirmation of his step." Ramsay, 85, 86.

Advance to South Galatia and Ministry at Antioch.

"Now Paul and his company set sail from Paphos, and came to Perga in Pamphylia: and John departed from them and returned to Jerusalem." It was this fact that caused Paul to refuse to take Mark on his second journey. Bartlet suggests that Paul may have planned to proceed directly to the cities in the Roman province of Asia, which lay along the western part of Asia Minor; and that he struck boldly north, over the Taurus Mountains to use the great road running westward. In this way he came to Pisidian Antioch, which was the governing center of the southern part of Galatia, not intending to remain there and preach, but was detained by an attack of fever, the germs of which he had caught in the low-lying malarial district of Pamphylia. This may explain his language in Gal. iv, 13: "Ye know that because of an infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you the first time." However this may be, as also the perils of rivers, robbers, and wilderness, 2 Cor. xi, 26, which some would place in this journey, his ministry in Antioch is to be regarded as having great significance for all his future course.¹ By the jealousy and opposition of the Jews on the second Sabbath of his recorded work, he was led to turn decisively to the Gentiles. Their response assured him that in a free ministry to them he truly fulfilled his divine vocation. "And the word of the Lord was spread abroad throughout all the region. But the Jews urged on the devout women of honorable estate, and the chief men of the city, and stirred up a persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and cast them out of their borders." Acts xiii, 13-52.

From Antioch the apostles went eastward to Iconium, doubtless concluding that the success already attained in Galatia called for their continuance in that province. "And it came to pass in Iconium that they entered together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake that a great multitude both of Jews and of Greeks believed." After some time spent here they were again compelled to flee, and passed south into another Galatic region, Lycaonia. At Lystra, Paul healed a cripple, which led the people to attempt to do sacrifice to them. But later, the Jews of Antioch and Iconium were able to mislead the fickle mind of the Lystrian populace, and Paul was stoned and left outside the city for dead. "But as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and entered into the city: and on the morrow he went forth with Barnabas to Derbe." Acts xiv, 1-20.

Return Journey.

After successful evangelizing work at Derbe, the missionaries "returned to Lystra, and to Iconium, and to Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples." They "appointed for them elders in every Church, . . . passed through Pisidia, and came to Pamphylia. And when they had spoken the word in Perga, they went down to Attalia; and thence they sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been committed to the grace of God for the work which they had fulfilled." Acts xiv, 21-28.

The student should not fail to sense the thrill of controlled but yet joyous enthusiasm that pervades this whole account.

STUDY VIII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiii, 2.

Read Acts xiii, 1-3. Note how fully the Holy Spirit governs the early Church, and determines all steps of advance. "It is the most interesting crisis in the world's history. There is no more important chapter in the unfolding of human progress than the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters of Acts." H. W. Warren.

STUDY VIII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiii, 12.

Read Acts xiii, 4-12. It should be noted that ver. 6 means that the apostles made a missionary progress through the island—a distance of about one hundred miles from Salamis to Paphos.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

The student should draw a very simple map of the north-eastern Mediterranean coast, Cyprus, and Asia Minor; put in the Provinces of Pamphylia and Galatia; locate the cities mentioned, and draw the course of the first missionary journey. See Map 1, which indicates Professor Ramsay's outline of the Roman Province of Galatia at this time.

STUDY VIII.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiii, 39.

Read Acts xiii, 13-52. Study this first reported sermon of Paul very carefully, comparing it with Peter's early sermons and Stephen's defense, and noting any characteristic Pauline thought.

STUDY VIII.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiv, 3.

Read Acts xiv, 1-20. Carefully mark the use of the word "region" in xiii, 49 and xiv, 7. It has here a specific meaning, and the first passage refers to Phrygian Galatia, the second to Lycaonian Galatia, each a regio of the great Galatian province. Paul's address at Lystra displays marvelous adaptation. The view is held that Timothy was won to Christ during this visit. C. H., I, 197, 198; Purves, sec. 128.

STUDY VIII.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiv, 22.

Read Acts xiv, 21–28. Bear in mind that in the return journey the apostles were probably favored by the fact of a change of magistrates, while their work was now with the converts, and therefore less public.

Questions for Written Answers.

1. How, probably, did the Holy Spirit deliver the command given in Acts xiii, 2?
2. Why is John Mark not mentioned till in ver. 5?
3. What reasons might be given for his return to Jerusalem?
4. Of whom must Paul have thought when he began to be struck by the stones at Lystra?
5. Can you outline Paul's method from indications given in this lesson? Purves, sec. 130.

STUDY VIII.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Acts xiv, 27.

Consider the remarkable advance in this lesson, registered in the new name "Paul," Acts xiii, 9, and such phrases as "justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses," xiii, 39, and "that He [God] had opened a door of faith unto the Gentiles." xiv, 27.

Personal Thought.

"Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Acts xiii, 2.

The Church at Jerusalem, at the time of its greatest spiritual need, sent out two of its best men, "Judas called Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren," and the Church at Antioch, located in one of the greatest as well as wickedest cities of the Roman Empire, sent out Barnabas and Paul.

Have I been inclined to keep the best for myself, and do I ever feel that the great need at home is a sufficient reason why I should refuse to help send the gospel to the needy portions of the earth?

JERUSALEM COUNCIL—GENTILE LIBERTY ADMITTED.

STUDY IX.—First Day. Memory Verse, Gal. ii, 20.

There is general agreement by recent writers that the council at Jerusalem to be considered in this Study was held about 50 A. D.¹ For the twenty years intervening between Pentecost and this date, the Book of Acts gives only a brief record in a particular line of development. It would be interesting to know of the work of the original twelve apostles during this period, but there remains only uncertain tradition. The most probable point stated about them is, that they did not separate for twelve years, because Christ had directed them to stay for that length of time in Jerusalem.² Studies IV and V have shown that James, the Lord's brother, began to have principal oversight of the Jerusalem Church about 42 A. D. onward, which would be in accord with a view that the twelve apostles were now engaged in labors abroad.

The Twelve
Apostles
50 A. D.

The only New Testament allusion to the presence of any of the twelve outside of Palestine up to the time of this lesson is that contained in Gal. ii, 11-14: "When Cephas came to Antioch, I resisted him to the face, because he stood condemned. For before that certain came from James, he ate with the Gentiles; but when they came, he drew back and separated himself, fearing them that were of the circumcision. And the rest of the Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that even Barnabas was carried away with the dissimulation. But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the Gospel, I said unto Cephas before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest as do the Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, how compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?" This episode was referred to at the close of the Narrative in Study VII, but it may better be placed here, since the issue raised finds its decision at the Jerusalem council. Evidently Peter did not come to Antioch for the purpose of giving the Church official recognition, for that had been done at the earlier visit of Barnabas. And while Barnabas wavered for a moment in the face of a difficult problem, he at once took his place again beside Paul; and doubtless Peter came back to his former ground of fellowship with the Gentile Christians, after he saw the case in the clear light of Paul's logic. Also the statement, "certain came from James," does not necessarily mean that James had commissioned them to bear instructions to the Antiochian Church, but perhaps to work among the Jews of Syria. They are probably the same persons mentioned in Acts xv, 1-5.¹ "And certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren, saying, Except ye be circumcised after the custom of Moses, ye can not be saved. And when Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and questioning with them, the brethren appointed" the two named and certain others "to go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question." On the way they passed through Phœnicia and Samaria, "declaring the conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great joy unto the brethren." At Jerusalem "they were received of the Church and the apostles and the elders," and again reported their work among the Gentiles. "But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees who believed, saying, It is needful to circumcise them, and to charge them to keep the law of Moses." Acts xv, 1-5.

been much questioning, Peter rose up," and made a speech in favor of the complete freedom of the new converts, calling attention to the testimony of God in the case of Cornelius, and declaring that faith in Christ was the only condition of salvation. "And all the multitude kept silence; and they hearkened unto Barnabas and Paul rehearsing what signs and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles through them." Next James, who seems to have presided at the council, arose, and, after pointing out the indications of God's will both in recent events and in prophecy, submitted a proposition to be taken as the sense of the meeting, and it was embodied in the following action and letter. Acts xv, 6-21.

"Then it seemed good to the apostles and elders, with the whole Church, to choose men out of their company, and send them to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; . . . and they wrote thus by them, The apostles and the elders, brethren, unto the brethren who are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia, greeting: Forasmuch as we have heard that certain who went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls; to whom we gave no commandment; . . . it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things: that ye abstain from things sacrificed to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, it shall be well with you. Fare ye well." Acts xv, 22-29.

Results of Council.

"So they, when they were dismissed, came down to Antioch; and having gathered the multitude together, they delivered the Epistle. And when they had read it, they rejoiced for the consolation. And Judas and Silas, being themselves also prophets, exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them. And after they had spent some time there, they were dismissed in peace from the brethren unto those that had sent them forth.

Report at Antioch.

But Paul and Barnabas tarried in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also." Acts xv, 30-35.

Never accept an explanation of a Scripture difficulty that does not really satisfy your reason and conscience.

STUDY IX.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Gal. ii, 21.

Read Gal. ii, 11-21. While Bartlet, 60, places the vacillation of Peter and wavering of Barnabas before the first missionary journey, and Purves, secs. 163-166, locates it after the Jerusalem council, on the whole, the best arrangement is that of Ramsay, 159-166, who assigns it to the period just before the council. Consider how much Paul's firm grasp of the principles of Christ's new kingdom meant for the harmony and growth of the early Church.

STUDY IX.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xv, 3.

Read Acts xv, 1-5. From ver. 5 it appears that the men who were bent on enforcing the necessity of circumcision were Pharisees prior to their belief in Jesus as Messiah, and perhaps had little sympathy with the genius of the gospel.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

The time given to map work might be devoted to a study of the City of Jerusalem. See Bib. Dict., Hurlbut, 73-85.

STUDY IX.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xv, 8.

Read Acts xv, 6–21. Note that Peter, with his broad and practical common sense, points to the Divine decision of the question in the gift of the Holy Ghost. Then, as the silence of interest falls on the assembly, Barnabas and Paul, in wise order and at the right moment, bear witness to God's approving seal on their work, and finally James, as chairman, sums up, and, according to Oriental usage, states the practical resolution.

PAUL'S SECOND MISSIONARY JOURNEY— CORINTH A NEW CENTER.

STUDY X.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts xv, 40.

It was not long after the close of the last lesson when Paul proposed to Barnabas that they visit the brethren in the field of their first journey. But a difference arose about taking John Mark, and the two apostolic workers separated. Barnabas took Mark and sailed for Cyprus, and no account is given of his further career. “Paul chose Silas, and went forth, being commended by the brethren to the grace of the Lord.” Acts xv, 36–41.

Paul planned his second journey to extend through Asia Minor, and the Holy Spirit enlarged the mission to include Macedonia and Greece. Taking the overland route through northwestern Syria and Cilicia, probably in the spring of 50 A. D.,¹ Paul and Silas stopped at Derbe a short time, and then passed on to Lystra, where they met young Timothy, the son of a Jewess, whose father was a Greek. “Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and he took and circumcised him because of the Jews that were in those parts.” Acts xvi, 1–5.

The Holy Spirit Directs to Macedonia.

Having visited the Churches established during the first tour,¹ Paul and Silas planned to enter the Roman Province of Asia in Western Asia Minor, but the Holy Spirit forbade their speaking there, and they were also restrained by the "Spirit of Jesus" from entering Bithynia, a province to the north, "and passing by Mysia, they came down to Troas. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There was a man of Macedonia standing, beseeching him, and saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia." Acts xvi, 6-10.

At Philippi.

The first place in Europe at which the apostles paused to preach was Philippi, where there were but few Jews, and these were without a synagogue. On the Sabbath-day they went out to the bank of the river where the people were accustomed to assemble for worship. "And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, one that worshiped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened to give heed unto the things which were spoken by Paul." It was also at Philippi that Paul cast an evil spirit out of a maiden "who brought her masters much gain by soothsaying. . . . They laid hold on Paul and Silas," and brought them before the rulers or magistrates. The trial resulted in their being beaten with rods and cast into prison. About midnight, while the two servants of Christ "were praying and singing hymns to God, and the prisoners were listening to them," the prison was shaken, and the doors were miraculously opened and their bands were loosed. Paul and Silas did not escape, but cried to the dismayed jailer, "We are all here." Then the jailer asked, "What must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house. . . . And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, immediately." Learning they were Roman citizens, the magistrates with fear besought them to depart. Acts xvi, 11-40.

After passing through Amphipolis and Apollonia, the missionaries visited two other points in Macedonia—Thessalonica and Berea. The usual jealousy of the Jews was aroused in the first-named city, and such disturbance kindled that Jason and other brethren were brought before the rulers and required to give security. Paul and his helpers were thereupon sent by night to Berea, where their ministry met with a most favorable reception, till the Thessalonian Jews came and stirred up fresh trouble. Paul was now sent to Athens by boat, and Silas and Timothy soon followed him.¹ Acts xvii, 1-15.

At Thessalonica and Berea.

The Athens of Paul's day was not that of the time of Socrates, but it was even then the center of the world's education, where philosophers regularly taught in lecture-room and university.² On Mars' Hill, probably at the point where the court of the Areopagus met, the apostle gave to the Athenians a sermon of marvelous philosophical insight and rhetorical strength. "Certain men clave unto him, and believed: among whom also was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them." Acts xvii, 16-34.

At Athens.

From Athens, Paul went to Corinth, the capital of Achaia. Here he met a Jew, Aquila, and his wife Priscilla. The three became fast friends, and worked together at their common trade of tent-making, while Paul "reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded Jews and Greeks." After the coming of Silas and Timothy, he "was constrained by the word, testifying to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ." He was now compelled to leave the synagogue, but continued his work in the house of Titus Justus near by. "And Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, believed in the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized." Acts xviii, 1-11.

Conclusion of Second Missionary Journey.

In the subsequent opposition of the Jews, Gallio, the liberal-minded Proconsul of Achaia, so fully favored the apostle that the populace were emboldened roughly to handle Sosthenes, the new ruler of the synagogue. At Corinth, Paul wrote the two Epistles to the Thessalonians. With his work crowned with large success, the great leader at length turns his face toward Jerusalem. Aquila and Priscilla accompanied him as far as Ephesus, where they remain, while he, after a brief sojourn, hastens forward by way of Caesarea, salutes the Jerusalem Church, and goes down to Antioch. Acts xviii, 12-22.

Enrich the lesson of this week by surrounding it in your mind, as far as possible, with the atmosphere of the Greek life of that day.

PART IV.—ELEVENTH WEEK.

THE CHURCH OF THE THESSALONIANS SEEN THROUGH PAUL'S FIRST LETTERS.

STUDY XI.—First Day. Memory Verse, 1 Thess. i, 1.

The city of Thessalonica, at the head of the Thermaic gulf, toward the north of the Ægean Sea, was the metropolis of the Roman Province of Macedonia, and capital of the second of its four divisions. By reason of its fine situation with respect to commerce, both by land and sea, it has continued to be a place of large population, the present city, Saloniki, having more than 150,000 inhabitants.¹

lonica.

The last lesson has shown that the Thessalonian Church was founded during Paul's second missionary journey, probably in the latter part of 50 A. D. Silas and Timothy shared in the labors of the apostle at Thessalonica. Paul preached for three consecutive Sabbaths in the great synagogue, and won some Jews, but the converts were generally proselytes, and heathen people who "turned unto God from idols, to serve a living and true God." 1 Thess, i, 9. They were Thracians by race, with a considerable mixture of Celtic blood, and among them were "chief women not a few."

Founding of the Church.

Compelled to leave Thessalonica, with a limit of time probably fixed by the rulers or politarchs of the city during which he could not return, Paul dispatched Timothy from Athens to bring him word concerning the infant Church. His messenger reaches him at Corinth. Thereupon the First Epistle to the Thessalonians is written and sent by Timothy, perhaps toward the close of 51 A. D., and the Second in the same manner in the early part of 52. They therefore possess great interest as being the first letters of the apostle, and, with the probable exception of the Epistle of James, the earliest writings of the New Testament.

State of the Church.

As the Christian disciples of Thessalonica are viewed in the light of these letters, it is seen that the apostle had ground for heartfelt gratitude over their spiritual condition. 1 Thess. iii, 6, 7; i, 8. It is also plain that they are suffering persecutions, but are bravely enduring them "with joy of the Holy Spirit." i, 6. The tone of the first letter is therefore one of rejoicing and praise. "We thank God without ceasing. . . . For ye are our glory and joy." ii, 13, 20. At the same time the character of Paul seems to be attacked by bitter enemies, and he takes occasion to dwell upon his devoted labors while in Thessalonica.

The Lord's Return.

It would appear that, in the interval, these primitive Christians had become absorbed in contemplating the Lord's return. Out of this had arisen a peculiar practical problem. Would not some of their number who had died miss the joy and reward of his coming? The apostle's answer is given in iv, 13-18. "Paul evidently shared the universal belief of the early Church that Christ would return during the lifetime of the generation of Christians then on earth.¹ But he never made this a part of his gospel message." "The difference between the two Epistles is this: In the first, Paul teaches that Christ will come suddenly and without warning, whenever that may be; in the second, he teaches that it can not be just yet."² The correction of this idea prevailing in the Thessalonian Church, and of unfavorable results flowing from it, seems to have formed the chief reason for the writing of the second letter. In this Epistle, ii, 3-12, occurs a passage of which Professor Adeney, N. C. B., 243, 244, says, "This is one of the most perplexing passages in the New Testament." And this is his conclusion as to its possible meaning: "Do not be deceived. Christ will not come yet. First there will be a falling away of some of the Christians; then the full malignity of the Jewish power will be made manifest. It is very haughty and insolent now, claiming the temple as its own, and assuming the authority of God; but for the present the Roman Government restrains it. When the restraining influence is removed it will break out with full violence. But then Christ will come and destroy it."

The Man of Sin.

The practical advices and precepts given by Paul toward the close of these letters are very striking. He dwells chiefly on increase in brotherly love, on social purity and industry, on giving honor to the Church leaders, and on constant watchfulness, praise, and prayer. In the first Epistle he uses the term "saints" for the spirits of the departed servants of God, 1 Thess. iii, 13; in the second, for all the godly, 2 Thess. i, 10; in both Epistles, under terms having the same root meaning, he lifts up the pure Christian standard and declares that this is made possible through the Holy Spirit. 1 Thess. iii, 13; iv, 3, 4, 7, 8; v, 23; 2 Thess. ii, 13.

Practical Advices.

After reading an Epistle through to get our first general impressions of its practical drift and purpose, the next move of importance is to work out independently a general outline.

STUDY XI.—Second Day. Memory Verse, 1 Thess. i, 6.

Read 1 Thess. i, ii. Note that this first letter illustrates the general structure of all of Paul's Epistles: 1. A salutation or greeting; 2. A thanksgiving to God for the Christian gifts and graces of his converts; 3. A doctrinal portion; 4. A practical section; 5. Personal messages, salutations, etc.; 6. A brief autograph conclusion, ending in a benediction. But here the doctrinal, practical, and personal portions are intermingled, and there are no closing salutations.¹

STUDY XI.—Third Day. Memory Verse, 1 Thess. iv, 13.

Read 1 Thess. iii, iv. This first writing of Paul preserved to us should be most carefully studied to see what Christian truths or doctrines can be discerned. Notice the many times the word "God" occurs, and how the name "Father" is connected with it, i, 1, 3; iii, 11, 13; the use of "Lord" with the names for Christ or alone; the frequent reference to the Holy Spirit; the prominent teaching concerning Christ's return, and many other beliefs. It would be well to write out in your notebook as complete a list as you can from the two Epistles.²

PART IV.—TWELFTH WEEK.

GREAT PRINCIPLES APPLIED IN SOUTH GALATIA.

STUDY XII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Gal. i, 1.

Galatia proper was a cold and dreary district toward the north of Asia Minor, about two hundred miles long from east to west and one hundred miles wide. The name descended from the Gauls, warrior tribes who came from Western Europe in the third century B. C. and conquered the native Phrygian population. Later, the two races were blended together, the region was absorbed by Roman conquest, and became a part of the empire. As such it gave name to a larger Roman province extending almost across Asia Minor centrally, north and south. The earlier view was that Paul, in his second missionary journey, evangelized the original Gallic or Celtic people in the north, having, as their principal cities, Ancyra, Tavium, and Pessinus, and that the Epistle to the Galatians was addressed to them. But under the powerful leadership of Professor Ramsay, the greatest authority on the geography and antiquities of Asia Minor, the "South Galatian" theory is now being widely accepted, which holds that the Epistle is directed to the Churches in Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe, planted by Paul in his first missionary journey, and visited in his second journey.

Galatia and the "South Galatian." Theory.

These are some of the points in favor of this view: Points in its Favor.

1. Paul invariably wrote of the places he visited under the names of the Roman provinces to which they belonged. He also was in the habit of traveling along great Roman highways or well-known routes. As he states that "because of an infirmity of the flesh" he preached the Gospel to the Galatians the first time, Gal. iv, 13, it is not considered likely that in his condition he would have taken a rough and little-frequented path over a wild mountainous region to reach North Galatia. 2. We have a full account in Acts of the founding of the South Galatian Churches, but no mention of the origin of the Churches in the north. 3. Paul's tone of authority in the Epistle could be employed with the weak Phrygian people of the South far more wisely and tactfully than with the proud Celtic people of the North. 4. Barnabas was with Paul in the first journey, and there would be aptness in the two references to him in the Epistle, if the apostle is writing to the people of South Galatia, especially in the expression, "even Barnabas," Gal. ii, 13, as he would be well known to them, but unknown to those of the North. But since some authors, including Purves, in books of recent date, still maintain the other view, there is liberty of opinion, and undue stress should not be laid on either side of the argument.

Place and Date of the Letter.

The place and date of the writing of the Epistle are also in question. Ramsay, 190-192, would place it at Syrian Antioch, just before Paul starts on his third missionary journey, A. D. 53, and on the basis of a report brought by Timothy. Others would place it later during this journey.

Why Written.

It is evident that the Epistle is written by the apostle under a keen sense that his work among the Galatians was imperiled by the influence of Judaizing teachers, who had visited the Galatian Churches and were seeking to lead Paul's converts to adopt Jewish rites and observances. To accomplish their end they had assailed the official standing of the apostle and the genuineness of the gospel he preached.

Paul's First Aim.

Paul therefore begins his letter abruptly, making no complimentary allusion to the Galatians, as he does to members of other Churches to whom he writes, and at once asserts his apostolic calling as coming directly from God, and his gospel as received through the revelation of Christ. The details of his life, especially his visits to Jerusalem and reproof of Peter, are recounted in the early part of the letter to show that he did not derive his gospel from the older apostles, and he closes this introductory passage with this profound statement: "I, through the law, died unto the law, that I might live unto God. I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me; and that life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself up for me." Gal. i, ii.

From this point onward the apostle powerfully uplifts and applies the great principle of the gospel that Christian righteousness or justification, which is simply right relation with God, is by faith through grace, and not by the works of the law. He also sets forth the principles of adoption or sonship and heirship. By a contrast between the children of Hagar and Sarah, Paul shows that "we are not children of a handmaid, but of the free woman." Gal. iii, iv.

His Central Purpose.

"For freedom did Christ set us free; stand fast, therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage. . . . Ye. . . . were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh, but through love be servants one to another." How shall this full freedom be maintained? Paul answers, "Walk by the Spirit," and then contrasts "the works of the flesh" and "the fruit of the Spirit." The letter concludes with practical counsels and a brief apostolic benediction. Gal. v, vi.

Freedom.

Never was a document issued that meant more for the universal liberty of man than the Epistle to the Galatians. "As a whole, the letter is an eloquent and powerful claim for freedom of life, freedom of thought, freedom of the individual from external restrictions and regulations, freedom for all to work out their own salvation and develop their own nature, . . . freedom to do right, not freedom to do everything; 'the whole law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"¹

Great Influence of the Epistle.

When Paul refers to "the works of the law," let us remember that his thought is usually focused on the burdensome ritual of the Jews.

STUDY XII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Gal. i, 8.

Read Gal. i. Note the intense earnestness with which Paul immediately brings forward the principles of his Gospel, as against those who would pervert the Galatians. The great words of his own statement of Christian truth begin at once to appear, in his use of the word "grace," ver. 6 and 15.

STUDY XII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Gal. ii, 19.

Read. Gal. ii. No one can measure the influence of Paul's teaching as to justification "by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law," ver. 16, upon all the subsequent course of Church history.

They had not yet accepted circumcision, though strongly urged thereto by the false teachers.

STUDY XII.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Gal. v, 22, 23.

Read Gal. v. Mark the positive assurance in ver. 16 of constant victory for those whose daily course of life is "by the Spirit."

Questions for Written Answers.

1. What was the occasion of Paul's letter to the Galatians?
2. Why does he give so many items of his biography at the opening of the letter?
3. What great key-words of Pauline Christianity have their earliest use in this Epistle?
4. What words appear in the Epistle to show the believer's new privileges or standing?
5. What things are named as composing the fruit of the Spirit?
6. In what does Paul glory?
7. What does he bear "branded" on his body?

STUDY XII.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Gal. vi, 14.

Read Gal. vi. The last words of the apostle before the benediction are very impressive, and probably refer to the scars left by persecution, which he counts as the evidences in his body that he belongs to Jesus.

Personal Thought.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. vi, 7.

It is the law of the harvest that a man reaps the same kind of grain that he sows, and he reaps a great deal more than he sows. This is an awful thought to the sinner, and a comforting thought to the Christian. We should never become weary in well-doing: "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

PART IV.—THIRTEENTH WEEK.

PAUL'S THIRD MISSIONARY JOURNEY—
EPHESUS A NEW CENTER.

STUDY XIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts xviii, 28.

After remaining in Antioch for some time, Paul began his third missionary journey late in the spring of 53 A. D.¹ For the last time he now goes through the Syrian gates, the only pass in the Amanus Mountains, across his native Cilicia, perhaps stopping at Tarsus, through the Cilician gates,² and at length finds himself among the Galatian Churches, to whom he had recently addressed the letter considered in the previous Study.

Paul's Course to Galatia.

It was at about this time that Apollos, an Alexandrian Jew, visited Ephesus and began to preach, knowing only the baptism of John. "But when Priscilla and Aquila heard him, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more accurately." Being commended by the brethren, he went over into Greece, and "helped them much which had believed through grace; for he powerfully confuted the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ." Acts xviii, 23-28.

Apollos Visits
Ephesus and Corinth.

From Galatia, Paul passed over the higher-lying and more direct road to the north of the regular trade route through the Lycus and Meander Valleys, and arrived at Ephesus probably in September. The case of Apollos illustrates the advance from John's baptism to that of the Holy Spirit. A similar completing of faith also occurs with the twelve men whom Paul found at Ephesus needing instruction. "And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Spirit came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied." Acts xix, 1-7.

Extent of His Ministry and Influence.

Ephesus, the capital of the Province of Asia, ranked with Antioch in Syria and Alexandria in Egypt as one of the three great cities of the Eastern Mediterranean. The lines of trade and travel, both by sea and land, combined to make the city the natural basis from which Paul's presentation of the gospel would spread through the entire province. The word would be heard by provincials who visited the city, and would be carried by Paul's helpers to many of the other cities and towns. His ministry began in the synagogue, where "he spake boldly for the space of three months;" and afterward he reasoned "daily in the school of Tyrannus. And this continued for the space of two years; so that all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks." The apostle also wrought miracles, and the discomfiture of the seven sons of Sceva, a Jewish priest, in their attempt to cast the evil spirit out of a man, only added to Paul's fame and influence. "And not a few of them that practiced magical arts brought their books together and burned them in the sight of all; and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. So mightily grew the word of the Lord and prevailed." Acts xix, 8-22.

The Riot of Demetrius.

The latter part of Paul's stay at Ephesus was marked by a riot, stirred up by Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen, the makers of silver shrines of Diana, whose magnificent marble temple was the chief ornament and glory of the city. The apostle was delivered from imminent danger through the friendly offices of the Asiarchs, chief men of the province. Acts xix, 23-41.

Paul's Larger Plans and Course to Jerusalem.

The remarkable development of the apostle's work in Ephesus and the Province of Asia did not hide from his vision the larger fields beyond, and already he had said, "I must also see Rome." But first he would bring together the funds gathered by his faithful members and agents in the Churches of this and other provinces, for the assistance of the poor, and convey them to Jerusalem. In fulfillment of this purpose he visited Macedonia, and then spent three months in Greece. A plot formed against him by the Jews led to the retracing of his steps through Macedonia. In the farther course he went by ship from one point to another. The scenes of his prolonged discourse at Troas, of his counsels and appeals at Miletus to the elders of the Church at Ephesus and tearful parting with them, of his brief sojourn in the home of Philip the Evangelist at Cæsarea, form the periods of one of the most interesting and touching passages found in Acts. At the end of vain efforts to dissuade him, Paul says, "What do ye, weeping and breaking my heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts xx, 1—xxi, 16.

It is supposed that Paul reached Jerusalem just before Pentecost, which fell on May 28th, in the year 57 A. D. From Ephesus, in the spring of 55,¹ he wrote the First Epistle to the Corinthians; from Macedonia, in the spring of 56, the Second Epistle to the Corinthians; from Corinth, at the beginning of 57, the Epistle to the Romans.²

Close of the Journey and Dates of Epistles.

The student should again be on the alert, lest, owing to the modest simplicity of Luke's style, he should fail to note his supreme greatness as a historian.

STUDY XIII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts xix, 2.

Read Acts xviii, 23—xix, 22. Note that the coming of the Spirit upon the twelve men, xix, 6, is a parallel case to the bestowal of the Spirit in Samaria and Cæsarea, and registers the Divine seal upon the advance step now made by Paul in this great province. The "school" of Tyrannus, ver. 9, means a lecture-room such as the rhetoricians used for their exercises. "We may safely imagine that most if not all of the seven 'Churches of Asia' addressed in the Apocalypse had their origin about this time, as well as the Churches of Colosse and Hierapolis, the neighbors of Laodicea in the Lycus Valley."¹

STUDY XIII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xix, 23.

Read Acts xix, 23-41. The stone amphitheater of Ephesus was of immense size: "When this crowd assembled there it was a building that could hold 25,000 or 30,000 people."²

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

Draw a simple outline map, leaving out all details, except those called for by the Third Missionary Journey, such as the several cities and islands named and the Province of Asia, and mark the course of Paul. See Map 2, and also Ramsay, map.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Paul revisits Galatia and Phrygia, Acts xviii, 23; Apollos at Ephesus and Corinth, 24-28; Paul proceeds to Ephesus and baptizes twelve men, with signs of the Spirit's approval, xix, 1-7; preaches and works miracles, 8-20; plans for the future, 21, 22; the riot, 23-41; Paul visits Macedonia and Greece, xx, 1, 2; course to Miletus, 3-17; address to the Ephesian elders, 18-35; farewell and farther course to Jerusalem, xx, 36-xxi, 16.

STUDY XIII.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xx, 12.

Read Acts xx, 1-16. The student should picture the experiences of Paul not recorded by Luke. On his way "into Macedonia," ver. 1, the apostle first waits restlessly at Troas for Titus to bring him tidings from Corinth. When the latter does not arrive, Paul goes onward, and meets him in Macedonia, writes Second Corinthians and sends it, and perhaps then makes the visit to Illyricum alluded to in Rom. xv, 19.

STUDY XIII.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xx, 35.

Read Acts xx, 17-38. Note the use of the word "bishops" in ver. 28, with the marginal "overseers," as descriptive of the elders as guardians or shepherds of the less experienced members. In this early period the term is not used in an official sense. The entire address should be read and studied with great care.

STUDY XIII.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxi, 13.

Read Acts xxi, 1-16. On the phrase, "these said to Paul through the Spirit," ver. 4, Meyer remarks: "The Spirit had testified to them that a fate full of suffering awaited Paul in Jerusalem, and this in their loving, zealous care they took as a valid warning to him not to go to Jerusalem. But Paul himself was more fully and correctly aware of the will of the Spirit."

Write in the notebook your chapter-names for Acts xviii-xx, and read, for the story of the period, Bird, 324-414.

Personal Thought.

"And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: save that the Holy Spirit testifieth unto me in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But I hold not my life of any account as dear unto myself, so that I may accomplish my course." Acts xx, 22-24.

A successful work, a loving circle of friends, a constitution none too strong and already worn with the hardship of many journeys,—all these things constrained St. Paul to stay in Ephesus. The only promise he had as he left Miletus was that bonds and afflictions awaited him in Jerusalem, but he had a world-vision and a God-given work. Am I in the place Divinely intended for me? or is there a "region beyond" where I am needed more? Are the grounds sufficient upon which I have decided to remain in my present work? Am I following closely the leading of the Spirit?

PAUL'S MASTERLY LETTER ON CHURCH ORDER.

STUDY XIV.—First Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. i, 9.

Among the abundant labors of the apostle during his residence in Ephesus was the writing of his first extant Epistle to the Corinthians. Through Apollos, doubtless, Paul had heard some very unfavorable reports of the progress of the converts at Corinth, many of whom were slaves, and all of whom had the severest temptations. There is good reason for believing that in addition to the report of Apollos, Paul had written a previous Epistle, which has been lost, and that in response to this letter the Corinthians, by the hands of Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, had sent a reply to Paul, asking concerning certain things which troubled them. From First Corinthians, which was a reply to the inquiries of the Church at Corinth, we gather that they asked concerning (1) marriage, (2) meat offered to idols, (3) matters relating to public worship, (4) spiritual gifts, (5) the resurrection, (6) the collection for the poor in Judea, (7) the sending of Apollos back to them. Furthermore, "by them which are of the household of Chloe," the party spirit and disorders which had crept into the Church had been made known to the apostle, 1 Cor. i, 11. Even the ministry of Apollos had not been altogether salutary. His impassioned oratory had caused some to underestimate the worth of the great apostle. Besides Apollos, Judaizing Christians from Jerusalem, claiming the authority of Peter, or Cephas, as they called him, had preached the necessity of circumcision. They exalted ans.

Peter as the God-appointed head of the Church and sought to undermine Paul.

Factions in the Church.

The names, therefore, of Paul and Apollos and Peter, and even Christ, had become party names. No actual division had resulted in the Church, but Paul knew that such factions might easily result in division. The Church, in maintaining this sharp contention concerning individuals, was forgetting the simple message of the cross which he had preached. Paul now teaches in this letter that he and Apollos and Peter are laborers with Christ, and he asks, "Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized into the name of Paul?" He concludes by saying, "Wherefore let no one glory in men. For all things are yours; whether Paul or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." Yet he adds that in the question of human agents, he was their "father" in the gospel. 1 Cor. i—iv.

Sinful Practices and Social Conditions.

The Church at Corinth was composed largely of people of unfavorable antecedents. Their parentage and training had been such as to vitiate their appetites and desires. Former habits of life were not easily thrown aside, and it was exceedingly difficult for them to rise to the exalted standard of the gospel. They were sorely tempted to sensuality, which they saw all about them, and with which they had been familiar all their lives. Their environment taught them to be dishonest and untruthful. There were quarrels and resulting contests in the heathen courts. Christians were even defending these things. One prominent member of the Church was living in notorious crime with his stepmother during the lifetime of his father, and no effort had been made to expel him. Paul therefore spoke out plainly on these points and the subject of marriage and divorce. He commands the expulsion of the man living in incest, urges fidelity to marriage vows, and advises that marriages formed even with unbelievers should not be broken, unless the unbelieving depart; and in general he counsels all to remain in the state in which they are. 1 Cor. v—vii.

In answer to their question concerning food offered to idols, which the people bought in the markets, Paul instructed them that since the idol was nothing there could be no contamination by eating this meat, but since even Christians, in this relation, were sometimes called upon to eat and drink in honor of some god, and such eating and drinking would be understood as a recognition of the idol, such practice should be avoided if it caused a brother to stumble. 1 Cor. viii—x. Food Offered to Idols.

He next corrected abuse in public worship. Women, in their enthusiasm, often forgot the customs of their day and uncovered their heads and addressed the congregation and engaged in the disputes. These practices Paul regarded as unbecoming, and he directs that ordinarily women should not speak publicly, but if the Spirit made an exception to this rule, modesty must not be laid aside. The Lord's Supper should also be observed with decorum and reverence and in the spirit of brotherly love. 1 Cor. xi. Abuses in Public Worship.

The later chapters of the Epistle will be considered in the next Study.

First Corinthians is the commentator's delight, because scarcely any New Testament writing is more capable of being illuminated by a portrayal of the historical situation, nor is any more susceptible of a definite and clear analysis.

STUDY XIV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. i, 30.

Read 1 Cor. i. It is thought that Sosthenes, who unites with Paul in the greeting, may be the former ruler of the synagogue at Corinth. On ver. 2, Godet says: "The whole Epistle is, as it were, summed up beforehand in these two ideas: holiness of the members, unity of the body." Note, also, the two great truths, "Christ crucified," ver. 23, and God's choice, ver. 27-31.

What sinful practices would St. Paul speak against if he were to write a letter to my Church to-day, after having been fully informed as to the conditions in that Church? What harmful tendencies in my own life would he condemn if he were to write to me or concerning me? Do I seek to know the mind of Christ as Paul sought to know it? Do I realize the difficulties of right living, and do I exercise myself to overcome these difficulties?

PART IV.—FIFTEENTH WEEK.

THE SUPREMACY OF LOVE.

STUDY XV.—First Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xii, 13.

Of this first canonical letter to the Corinthians, Bartlet says that it is "one of the most wonderful of letters, whether as a revelation of the qualities of the writer's heart and mind, or as a factor in a great crisis in religious history." The chapters which remain to be considered form a section unsurpassed for breadth, ethical beauty, eloquence, and literary power by anything that came from the pen of the apostle. The great theme of chapter xiii, as Sabatier observes, controls the thought of the Epistle, and produces its "profound unity," in spite of the many questions treated. Each solution that Paul suggests is simply "a new application of the permanent and general principles of the gospel. This Epistle exhibits the expansion of the Christian principle as it spreads into the sphere of practical affairs. While the letter to the Galatians was the foundation of Christian doctrine, the two letters to the Corinthians are the beginning of Christian ethics."

The Unifying Principle.

The key to this unity and variety of Christian life in the early Church is also in the constant action of the Holy Spirit. "For to one is given . . . the word of wisdom; . . . to another the word of knowledge; . . . to another faith; . . . to another gifts of healings; . . . to another workings of miracles; . . . to another prophecy; . . . to another discernings of spirits; . . . to another divers kinds of tongues; . . . to another the interpretation of tongues: but all these worketh the one and the same Spirit, dividing to each one severally even as he will." "Now ye are the body of Christ, and severally members thereof. And God hath set some in the Church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, then miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, divers kinds of tongues." 1 Cor. xii.

The Action of the Holy Spirit.

The Crowning Grace.

But beyond all these gifts and interpenetrating them is love. "How high and wide-reaching the spiritual requirements of this law of love are . . . is magnificently brought out in that incomparable hymn of love chanted by St. Paul in 1 Cor. xiii.¹ In connection with this chapter one thinks of the noble exposition of it by Henry Drummond.² He compares the qualities or ingredients of love, as given in verses 4-6, to the spectrum of light, and makes them nine,—patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness, sincerity,—and shows that "these make up the supreme gift, the stature of the perfect man." He then proves that love is supreme because it makes up the very texture of the life of God and all the good. "To love abundantly is to live abundantly, and to love forever is to live forever. . . . Give yourself first to love, . . . because it is going to last; because in the very nature of things it is an eternal life." 1 Cor. xiii.

Spiritual Gifts Orderly Worship.

In the next chapter the apostle presents the considerations and rules which should control the exercise of the spiritual gifts, so that "all things be done unto edifying," and also that they "be done decently and in order." 1 Cor. xiv.

The Resurrection.

Again, there occurs in the course of this letter the treatment of a great theme, that of the resurrection, in a manner to make it forever memorable. Paul starts from the fact of Christ's resurrection, and in ver. 5-8 he gives a remarkable summary of his appearances, closing with the appearance of Christ to himself. In the latter part of his argument he points to the analogy of seed-grain, to the variety of embodiments which God provides for different creatures, and to the range of magnitude and beauty in the heavenly bodies. He makes it plain that the body is redeemed and shall be changed and made incorruptible, and that death is to be "swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. xv.

In the closing chapter Paul directs the attention of the Corinthians to the collection which he is taking among the Churches for the poor of Judea. It is thought that the three brethren mentioned in ver. 17 had brought the letter from Corinth to which the apostle is making reply, which is sent, not by them, but by "the brethren" referred to in ver. 11. Apollos, ver. 12, probably regarded it as unwise and unloyal to Paul to visit Corinth at this time. 1 Cor. xvi.

Conclusion of the Letter.

It was the advice of Henry Drummond to an audience of students that they should read the thirteenth of First Corinthians every day for six months. Perhaps here is a suggestion of the way he prepared his own wonderful exposition.

STUDY XV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xii, 31.

Read 1 Cor. xii. On ver. 3, Stevens remarks: "The earliest creed of Christendom consists of two words (in Greek),—Jesus is Lord." Truly to say this with personal acceptance of its full depth of meaning involves the renewing of the soul through the Holy Spirit. Note that the figure of the body and its members shows that the unity of Christians is a vital unity: they partake of one common life, and are organic parts of one whole. For the complete efficiency of this "body of Christ" there must be a wide range of variety in its members; each member, even to the humblest, must be active; and all must be bound together by mutual sympathy and feeling for each other. What a design for a Church!

STUDY XV.—Third Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xiii, 13.

Read 1 Cor. xiii. The special “prophecies,” “tongues,” and “knowledge” of the primitive Church were to pass away, because, like the scaffolding of a building, these unusual gifts would be no longer needed when the Church was established. The reference to “seeing in a mirror, darkly,” is to a man seeing the figure of another in one of the imperfectly reflecting metal mirrors of that day compared to seeing the man “face to face.” The entire chapter is worthy of being committed to memory.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

Note that the four provinces—Galatia, Asia, Achaia, Macedonia—in which Paul has carried forward the Gentile Mission are mentioned in chapter xvi, making a line about six hundred miles east and west from Derbe to Corinth, and then northward about three hundred miles to Philippi.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Unity of the Church having diverse gifts, 1 Cor. xii; The supreme gift or grace of love, xiii; Edification and order in the use of gifts, xiv; The resurrection, xv; Closing directions and commendations and benediction, xvi.

(Concluded from Study XIV, Third Day.)

STUDY XV.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xiv, 15.

Read 1 Cor. xiv. “It was a happy circumstance for the future of Christianity that in these early days, when there were almost as many wild suggestions and foolish opinions as there were converts, there should have been this one clear, practical judgment, the embodiment of Christian wisdom.”¹ But the point is not to be missed that here is seen “a spectacle of fresh and transforming spiritual power . . . energizing in every member,” and that lifeless order can never compensate for the lack of this in the Church in any age.²

STUDY XV.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xv, 58.

Read 1 Cor. xv. The statements about the baptism "for the dead," ver. 29, perhaps present the greatest difficulty of the chapter. On this, Massie¹ remarks: "Perhaps we could combine the views of Evans and Godet, and say, 'They that are baptized with suffering in expectation of the resurrection of the dead.'"

STUDY XV.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, 1 Cor. xvi, 13.

Read 1 Cor. xvi. On ver. 2 note this from Meyer: "It does not, indeed, follow from this passage in itself that the Sunday was already observed at that time by assemblies for the worship of God, although this is to be assumed from other indications. See Acts xx, 7."

Personal Thought.

"But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love." 1 Cor. xiii, 13.

When Jesus Christ dwells in a man, that man instinctively loves his fellow-men, for Christ is love. Do I note an increase in unselfish love in my life day by day? How is it possible to cultivate this grace? How does Christian love manifest itself? In what ways to-day may I prove my love?

PAUL'S EMOTIONAL LETTER—A WINDOW INTO HIS HEART.

STUDY XVI.—First Day. Memory Verse, 2 Cor. i, 20.

In some respects Second Corinthians is the most difficult of all of Paul's Epistles adequately to understand and to present. Farrar pronounces this the least systematic, and First Corinthians the most systematic, of all the Pauline letters.¹ "There has been a storm; the air is still electric."² The letter is filled with emotion; and not one current of feeling, pure and strong, but an agitation and alternation of different currents. But why this conflict of emotion in the soul of the apostle? It is due to a flood of opposition and calumny at Corinth, and Paul is constrained to defend himself and his work. His sensitive spirit protests against this, for it involves the appearance of self-praise. Then there is the pain of unjust accusation and distrust, while, with immeasurable love and resolution the apostle seeks to win the Corinthian Church away from the influence of false teachers and perverse self-confidence. The Epistle thus becomes a window into his heart, through which we gain a rare insight into the very life of a resplendent soul.

Emotion the Key to the Epistle.

The following steps may have preceded the writing of this Epistle,³ at least they seem to explain some things found in the letter: (1) Visit of Titus and his companion, 2 Cor. xii, 16-18, to Corinth with the First Epistle. (2) Timothy arrives at Corinth by way of Macedonia. The discontent becomes more serious and he returns to Paul with the news. (3) Judaistic emissaries, 2 Cor. xi, 4, lead the Corinthians even to open rebellion, and word is brought to Paul. (4) He hastily visits Corinth by sea, his second visit, 2 Cor. ii, 1, but can not stem the tide, and retires to Macedonia, declaring he will return, and, if necessary, punish. (5) He does not, however, return from Macedonia—for proper reasons—but proceeds to Ephesus. (6) From Ephesus he sends a severe letter by Titus, stating that he is on the point of coming, 2 Cor. xii, 14; xiii, 1, but is again deterred on just grounds from going. (7) He grows impatient for news of the effect of his letter, and goes north to Troas, for mission work and to see Titus sooner. But his spirit has no rest, 2 Cor. ii, 7, and he leaves for Macedonia, where he meets Titus and is overjoyed at his good news. (8) He sends Titus back to Corinth with the present Epistle. (9) He follows himself, and spends three months there, Acts xx, 3.

Progress of Thought In the Early Chapters.

The letter is, therefore, drawn from Paul by the restoration of the Corinthians, and is an expression of deep personal feeling. It has been a period of mutual suffering, both with the apostle and now with his spiritual children, as they have seen the agony they brought "to the tenderest-hearted of Christian men." So the first thoughts of the Epistle are of kinship in suffering and of God's comfort. The way is now prepared so that he can explain and justify his failure to come to them, and his anxiety about the intermediate letter. He is led to speak of the ministration of the Spirit and of the nature and practice of his own ministry; of the distinction between believers and unbelievers, and the need of being separated; of his joy and comfort, and that of Titus, in the present devotion and affection of the Corinthians, though he had made them sorry unto repentance by the severe intermediate letter. 1 Cor. i—vii.

Liberality and the Blessings of Giving.

The second part of the Epistle takes up the subject of the collection, which has been long in abeyance; and Paul incites the Corinthians to liberality, both by the example of the Macedonians and by the motive to cheerful and bountiful giving which springs from God's bountiful grace and the corresponding harvest which returns to the giver from such sowing. "As ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all earnestness, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also. . . . For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich." 2 Cor. viii, ix.

The third division of the Epistle opens with thoughts concerning Christ as the standard, and then, in chapter xi, the apostle reluctantly and in humility unfolds his own heroic devotion to Christ and men. "Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? So am I? Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as one beside himself) I more; . . . Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep." Thence he passes to an account of his visions and revelations—the "thorn in the flesh," and God's sufficiency, and the Epistle concludes with references to his coming visit to Corinth, the counsel to self-examination, and the triune benediction. 2 Cor. x—xiii.

Heroic Apos-tleship.
God's Grace Sufficient.

Second Corinthians is hard to outline and construe, but has some of the stateliest and most precious passages for memorizing in all Holy Writ. Let the student treasure up at least one of these great paragraphs.

STUDY XVI.—Second Day. Memory Verse, 2 Cor. ii, 14.

Read 2 Cor. i, ii. Note that from i, 15, onward through ii, Paul is careful to explain why he did not carry out his promise to return to Corinth after his brief and unavailing second visit, but "out of much affliction and anguish of heart . . . wrote . . . with many tears," the severe letter, which brought them to repent, and to discipline the chief offender; and he now asks that forgiveness be shown him, ii, 6-10. After Paul "went forth into Macedonia," ii, 13, met Titus and sent him back to Corinth with this Epistle, he is supposed to have gone as far westward as at least the boundary of Illyricum, Rom. xv, 19.¹

PAUL'S LEADING LETTER ON CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE.

STUDY XVII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Rom. i, 14.

Paul has entered upon a course, in his missionary journeys and evangelization of great cities and provinces, which will naturally lead him to Rome. This immense metropolis, controlling the known world of that time, differed from the other cities which the apostle had visited, because the Church was already established there. Writers have not agreed as to whether the early Roman Church was made up chiefly of Jews or Gentiles, but more recent views incline strongly to the Gentile side, while granting that Jewish members and influences also formed a part of its life.

Rome, the Goal of Paul's Labors and the Church
there.

Paul wrote the Epistle to the Romans probably in the early part of the year 57 A. D., during his stay of three months at Corinth, near the close of his third missionary journey. Already he had expressed his purpose to visit the capital. While doubtless many of his converts had gone to Rome, and were found in the Church, he was personally unknown to the body of the members. This letter would bring him in touch with them, and prepare the way for his coming. Then, in the judgment of Bruce and others, the apostle saw that one more step must be taken to conclude the controversy with Judaism. Three questions—respecting the law, the apostolate, and the election of Israel—were involved. The Epistle to the Galatians met the first question, the two Epistles to the Corinthians the second, and the Epistle to the Romans meets the third. The tone of the letter is calm. Paul has won his battle at Corinth. He would console his Jewish brethren with the thought that though Israel is "broken off," their rejection is temporary. The imperial city appeals to the imagination of an imperial soul; Paul rises to the occasion, and writes with the largeness of a leader who believes that "the gospel . . . is the power of God unto salvation" to the entire race. "The gospel of God, which he promised afore through his prophets in the Holy Scriptures, concerning his Son, . . . even Jesus Christ our Lord, through whom we received grace and apostleship, unto obedience of faith among all the nations, . . . to all that are in Rome." Paul has come to the summit of his powers. Opposition has roused the latent energies of his nature. All the bearings of his Christian faith have been thought out, and their deep foundations discovered. Now they find expression in his leading doctrinal letter. If the Thessalonian letters are morning epistles, Galatians, Corinthians, and Romans are Paul's noon epistles. "And the greatest of these is"—Romans.¹

First Main Division.

The main divisions of the Epistle to the Romans are comparatively simple.² After the impressive salutation and personal explanations, i, 1-17, the doctrinal exposition begins with a survey of justification. First, in what may be called the "sin section," it is shown that righteousness has not been attained either by Gentiles or Jews, "for there is no distinction; for all have sinned, and fall short of the glory of God," i, 18—iii, 20. Next, it is proved that righteousness is provided in Christ, iii, 21-31, that such righteousness attained alone by faith is consistent with law, iv, and that it is attended with blissful effects, v, 1-11. The division assigned to justification then concludes with the consideration that Christ is more to the race than Adam. "For if, by the trespass of the one, death reigned through the one; much more shall they that receive the abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness reign in life through the one, even Jesus Christ." v, 12-21.

The doctrinal part of the Epistle next traverses the field of sanctification as its second main division in chapters vi—viii, and then takes up as its third and final division the profound problem of God's election of Israel as his chosen people, his present rejection of them and the bringing in of the Gentiles, and the hope of their ultimate restoration, ix—xi. With chapter xii the practical part of the Epistle opens.

Second and Third Main Divisions and Practical Part.

For the best allotment of the chapters of this powerful letter for constructive reading the dividing line is drawn for this and the following Study between chapters vii and viii. There is another reason for this. While both these chapters are in the portion of the letter in which Paul explains the process by which the Christian becomes holy, chapter vii gives the negative side, and chapter viii the positive. The passage from one to the other is a transition from bondage to a legal standard to the liberty of the "sons of God," from a hopeless struggle with the tendencies of one's own heart to the abounding life of the Holy Spirit.

Arrangement for Constructive Reading.

If the student thoroughly masters some simple outline of Romans, he will find himself greatly helped in the difficult task of understanding the course of its argument.

STUDY XVII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Rom. i, 16.

Read Rom. i, 1-25. Mark most carefully the words, ver. 17, "righteousness of God by faith unto faith," for they express the theme of the Epistle. It is now held that the righteousness of God means primarily God's attribute of righteousness, by which he not only prevents sin, but produces righteousness, so it fully consists with God as Love. Then, secondarily, it means the righteousness which is the gift of God to man, the state of forgiveness and acceptance before God, which has been provided for mankind in the work of Christ, and is bestowed on man at justification. For the former meaning see Fifth Day, Topic 4, and for the latter, Study XII, Fifth Day, Topic 4.

STUDY XVII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Rom. iii, 19.

Read Rom. ii, 1—iii, 20. The apostle here brings the whole world under conviction or condemnation of sin.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

“Obedience of faith among all the nations,” Rom. i, 5, suggests a survey of all the peoples or nations in the world as then known. See Hurlbut, 97, 98, or any map of the Roman Empire.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Apostolic salutation, i, 1-7; Personal explanations, 8-17; (The Doctrine of Justification) Righteousness hitherto unattained, i, 18—iii, 20; Righteousness provided in Christ, 21-31; Righteousness by faith consistent with law, iv; The blissful effects of righteousness, v, 1-11; Christ more to the race than Adam, 12-21; (The Doctrine of Sanctification) Faith as union with Christ, vi, 1-14; The service of sin and of righteousness, 15-23; Release from authority of law, vii, 1-6; The powerlessness of the law, 7-25; The state and privileges of the believer, viii.

(Outline concluded in Study XVIII, Third Day.)

STUDY XVII.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Rom. iii, 24.

Read Rom. iii, 21—iv, 25. Seek to dwell upon and study profoundly the great passage, iii, 21-27, in which the propitiatory work of Christ and its relations to God and man find wonderful expression. It would be well to commit these verses to memory.

Read Rom. vi. “For Paul two problems were solved by faith in Christ—how can the guilty be forgiven? and how can the sinful be made holy? Christ’s death for sin offered the solution of the one problem, and Christ’s life in the believer of the other.”¹ Note that the Epistle now enters upon the second of the problems.

PART IV.—EIGHTEENTH WEEK.

THE INHERITANCE OF THE BELIEVER.

STUDY XVIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Rom. viii, 2.

The principal message of the previous lesson was the establishment of the truth of justification, and the conclusion was reached that “a man is justified by faith apart from the works of the law.” But in the light of Paul’s experience and thought the great salvation could not be limited to the deliverance of man from condemnation. There must be a new life in Christ and in the Spirit. For this new life, in a broad and right sense, the term sanctification is used by the apostle, and by the latest and best writers who seek to describe his teaching.

Life Complete in Christ and in the Spirit.

It is in this sense that Garvie, Godet, Bartlet, Bruce, Stevens, Findlay, Purves, and others hold that Rom. vi—viii unfolds the doctrine of sanctification. Chapter vi does this mainly by showing that faith secures a vital union with Christ, so that the believer can present himself and all his members to the service of righteousness. Chapter vii demonstrates that a holy life can not be attained through the law.

The View of
ers.

But it is left for chapter viii to bring out in full measure the privileges and inheritance of the believer. This magnificent chapter stands central in the Epistle. Its ideas sweep on like the movements of a victorious army. Each phrase is a fresh note of triumph. “There is now no condemnation.” The believer is “free from the law of sin and of death.” He receives “the spirit of adoption,” becomes a child of God, an heir, and a joint-heir with Christ. All things work together for his good. He is more than conqueror, and nothing shall be able to separate him "from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." The chapter begins with "no condemnation;" it ends with no separation.

The Work of the Holy Spirit.

The Holy Spirit is the secret of this victorious life of the believer. Mark the constant reference to his presence and work: "the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free," "the law . . . fulfilled in us who walk . . . after the Spirit," "they that are after the Spirit" mind "the things of the Spirit," "the mind of the Spirit is life and peace," "ye are . . . in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you," "the Spirit of God," "the Spirit of Christ," "as many as are led by the Spirit of God . . . are sons of God," "the Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit," "the firstfruits of the Spirit," "the Spirit helpeth our infirmity," "the Spirit himself maketh intercession for us." "Paul's doctrine of the Spirit is at once ideal and practical. It deals with the commonest and homeliest virtues, and regards them as products of the Spirit's indwelling. Not devout fervors alone, not dreams of far-off ideals alone, but the every-day qualities which one needs most in his commonplace life, are the Spirit's work."¹

The Election of Israel.

It is now generally agreed that the doctrine of election, Rom. ix—xi, which forms the third and closing division of the doctrinal part of the Epistle, has reference, not to individuals, but to Israel as a whole.² Paul seeks to meet the objection and problem doubtless urged by his Jewish brethren: "If the Gentiles are freely admitted into the Church on the simple basis of faith, does it not amount to God's breaking his covenant with Israel, as his chosen people, so that the word of God hath come to naught?" Rom. ix, 6. Paul's answer, in brief, is that God's calling and covenant do not bind him to Israel, irrespective of the nation's character. "By their unbelief they were broken off. . . . And they . . . if they continue not in their unbelief, shall be grafted in . . . again." Rom. xi, 20, 23.

The practical portion of the Epistle has a first section, treating the general principles of Christian life, xii, xiii, and a second section which takes into account the circumstances of the Church in Rome, xiv—xv, 13. "Bless them that persecute you; bless, and curse not. Rejoice with them that rejoice; weep with them that weep. . . Take thought for things honorable in the sight of all men. . . Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." These are specimens of the many practical precepts in the first section. "If because of meat thy brother is grieved, thou walkest no longer in love. Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died . . . for the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. . . Now we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak." These words may illustrate the spirit of the second section. There then follow a conclusion, full of interesting personal references and doxologies, xv, 14—xvi. "Now I beseech you, brethren, by our Lord Jesus Christ, and by the love of the Spirit that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me. . . The God of peace be with you all. Amen. . . Salute Prisca and Aquila my fellow workers in Christ Jesus. . . Salute Persis the beloved, who labored much in the Lord. . . I Tertius, who write the epistle, salute you in the Lord."

Practical Part and Conclusion.

No man has mastered this Epistle until beneath its complicated logical processes he has sensed its suffused glow of controlled but intense emotion.

STUDY XVIII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Rom. viii, 28.

Read Rom. viii. "Spener is reported to have said that if holy Scripture was a ring, and the Epistle to the Romans its precious stone, chapter viii would be the sparkling point of the jewel."¹ Treasure this chapter as one of the noblest portions of the Bible.

STUDY XVIII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Rom. xii, 21.

Read Rom. xii. On ver. 1, weigh carefully these words, "The body is spoken of in this verse, the mind in the next. Christianity claims . . . the body. The sacrifice of the body is the avoidance of all self-indulgence in the gratification of animal appetite or sensual desire, the endurance of all hardship or want of the body that the service of Christ may demand, the exercise of all the powers of the body in doing the work of Christ in the world."²

THE CHURCH EXTENDED BY PAUL IN ROME AND ELSEWHERE—HIS LAST SEVEN LETTERS.

NINETEENTH WEEK.

PAUL'S CONTESTS IN JERUSALEM AND CÆSAREA.

STUDY XIX.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxi, 39.

In view of the extreme danger which Paul knew awaited him at Jerusalem, it might be asked why he should fulfill his plan of visiting the city. Stalker suggests as a reason the effect of Paul's presenting the collection for the poor in person.¹ Stifler would make the motive a final testimony to unbelieving Israel.²

Why Paul Visited Jerusalem.

The apostle and his company were cordially received by James and the elders, who "glorified God" for the work among the Gentiles. Yet they were anxious about Paul's reception by the Church, because of the reports that in his mission fields he had taught Jews to forsake Moses. To dispel this impression they proposed that he show publicly his respect for the law by observing certain rites of purification. He willingly assented, and joined with four brethren who had taken a vow, and paid their expenses. Acts xxi, 17-26.

His Reception and Effort to Conciliate the Church.

Toward the close of the seven days required to complete this observance, Jews from Asia circulated a false story that Paul had brought Gentiles within the sacred inclosure. A riot ensued, and Paul was rescued only by the prompt action of the soldiers from Antonia. When they reached the upper stairs the apostle obtained permission to address the people. As he spoke to them in the Hebrew or Aramaic tongue, they gave attention to an account of his conversion, but when he uttered the word "Gentiles" their rage and outcries again burst forth, and Lysias, the chief captain, hurried him into the castle. He was saved from scourging by revealing his Roman citizenship. Acts xxi, 27—xxii, 29.

Appearance before the Sanhedrin.

The next day Lysias brought his prisoner before the Sanhedrin. At his first words, the high priest, Ananias, directed that he be smitten on the mouth. This showed the temper of the tribunal and how little Paul could hope for a fair hearing, so he divided the council by asserting his faith as a Pharisee in the resurrection of the dead. The result was that the chief captain again found it necessary to command the soldiers to take Paul by force from the contending factions. "And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer: for as thou hast testified concerning me at Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome." Acts xxii, 30—xxiii, 11.

Deliverance to the Care of Felix.

The next day Paul's nephew learned that a band of more than forty conspirators were confederate with the council in a plot to assassinate the leader they so deeply hated. The young man was able to inform Lysias, and this officer, now fully awake to the peril of the situation, made careful preparation, and with an escort able to foil any possible attempt to thwart his purpose, conveyed Paul to Cæsarea. A letter to Felix, the governor, into whose keeping the apostle had come, stated that "this man was seized by the Jews . . . I . . . rescued him, having learned that he was a Roman. . . . And when it was shown me that there would be a plot . . . I sent him to thee forthwith, charging his accusers also to speak against him before thee." Acts xxiii, 12—33.

Paul now remained at Cæsarea for two years, or from June, 57, to about August, 59 A. D.¹ In the early part of this period he had his trial before Felix, in which the Jews' side was represented by a special advocate, Tertullus, and by Ananias and some of the elders. It was evident that they had no case, but Felix left him "in bonds." Yet his friends were able to see him freely and "to minister unto him." After Felix "came with Drusilla, his wife, who was a Jewess," and whom he had won away from Azizus of Emesa, he "sent for Paul and heard him concerning the faith in Christ Jesus." Though the address at the time stirred his conscience, he thrust aside the call to a better life. Near the close of the two years "Felix was succeeded by Porcius Festus." Under the new governor the Jews renewed their charges and there was a second examination of the apostle's case, in the midst of which Festus, "desiring to gain favor with the Jews . . . said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?" Thereupon Paul appealed to Cæsar. The final hearing at Cæsarea was before Festus, Herod Agrippa II, and his sister, Bernice, and yielded what is, perhaps, worthy to be regarded as the most remarkable address of Paul on record. Acts xxiii, 34—xxvi.

Detention for

Ramsay suggests that Luke is so very minute in describing the generally favorable attitude of Paul's Roman judges because the Roman power, at the time of writing, threatened to begin a general persecution.

STUDY XIX.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxiii, 11.

Read Acts xxiii. Bartlet, N. C. B., 346, considers that the meeting of the members of the Sanhedrin was not an ordinary one, that the chief captain probably presided, and that Paul, ver. 5, did not distinguish Ananias as the high priest.

STUDY XIX.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxiv, 25.

Read Acts xxiv. Though his helpers were permitted to visit Paul, and probably some of them, as Luke, to remain with him, his restraint for these two years and those which follow at Rome, must have been a severe trial to his active spirit. Yet there were compensations. He was in need of rest, after a long period of intense labors and sufferings arising from the perils of travel and persecution, 2 Cor. xi, 23-28, and these years of enforced quiet were a time of preparation for a period of marvelous productiveness in the "Prison Epistles" written at Rome.

STUDY XIX.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxv, 11.

Read Acts xxv. If the date of the arrival of Porcius Festus as governor could be fixed, it would afford a valuable basis for the chronology of the later chapters of Acts, and even of Paul's whole life, but no result commanding general acceptance has been reached, dates as far apart as 55 and 61 A. D. having been assigned for the recall of Felix. Bartlet says,¹ "In our view the summer of 58 (59) is a probable date for the arrival of Festus." This follows the view of Turner.² Of these two years Ramsay accepts 59 A. D., and with this the textbook agrees.

PAUL'S COURSE TO ROME.

STUDY XX.—First Day. Memory Verses, Acts xxvii, 23, 24.

At last the hour has come when Paul can start on his long-hoped-for course to Rome. The time is probably about the middle of August, 59 A. D. With other prisoners he is delivered into the charge of Julius, a centurion of the Augustan cohort, probably an auxiliary body used to maintain communication between the emperor and his armies in the provinces,¹ and able easily to perform the service now required. The voyage was begun in a ship of Adramyttium, a city fifty miles east of Troas. After touching at Sidon, where Paul was permitted to meet the brethren on shore, the course taken to avoid facing the western winds was east of Cyprus and along the coast of Cilicia and Pamphylia. At Myra the centurion embarked his convoy on what was probably one of the large grain ships supplying Rome from Egypt. Having in their farther course reached Cnidus, a run was made to the southwest, and shelter again found along the east and south coast of Crete. In this way they made the port of Fair Havens. Acts xxvii, 1-8.

From Caesarea to Fair Havens.

But the season was now late. The great Day of Atonement, which in 59 A. D. occurred on the 5th of October, was already past. Paul assured the company that farther sailing would result in danger and loss. But the captain and owner of the ship secured the approval of Julius, and sought to make Phœnix, forty miles to the northwest. It was not long after passing Cape Matala, four miles west of Fair Havens, that a "tempestuous wind . . . called Euraquilo" caught the ship, and it would probably have found dered had it not been able to gain the shelter of the island of Cauda, twenty-three miles to leeward. Here the small boat was drawn on board, the ship was undergirded, and all sail got down except just enough to keep the ship's head to the wind, which was a steady east-northeasterly gale. Acts xxvii, 9-17.

From Fair Havens to Cauda.

From Cauda to Melita.

The aim was to retard the progress of the ship and avoid the danger of the African quicksands. These were far away, but the wind might last many days. So, holding the ship up to the gale, they took the wind and waves on her broadside, and slowly drifted, slightly north of west. It is found that a ship thus drifting from Cauda would, on the fourteenth night, be near Melita.¹

Paul Becomes the Real Leader.

In the extreme peril and despair of this company the Christian faith and personality of Paul bring him to leadership. He stands forth in the midst and exhorts them "to be of good cheer." God, by a night vision, assured him that he is to "stand before Cæsar;" their lives are all granted him also, though by a wreck they "must be cast upon a certain island." Later, when the crisis approaches of beaching the ship and making their way to the shore, Paul prepares them for it by first invoking the blessing of God upon the food, eating himself and inspiring them to eat. Julius's regard for the apostle causes him to spare the lives of all the prisoners when the soldiers proposed that they be slain. Then the centurion "commanded that they who could swim should first cast themselves overboard, and get first to land; and the rest, some on planks, and some on other things from the ship. And so it came to pass that they all escaped safe to land." Acts xxvii, 18-44.

His Work at Melita.

During their three months' stay upon the island, Paul wrought miracles and taught the people the way of salvation. The first cure was that of the father of Publius, "the chief man of the island." "And when this was done, the rest also that had diseases in the island came, and were cured." When the company were about to sail for Rome the Melitese supplied them with such things as were needed. Acts xxviii, 1-10.

The ship stopped at Syracuse three days. Then, though the breeze was not from the south, they were able by good seamanship to work up to Rhegium.¹ Two days later they arrived at Puteoli, the point at which passengers debarked, while the ship, with its cargo of wheat, passed on to Ostia. The Christians of Puteoli persuaded Paul to tarry for a week with them, which allowed the news of his arrival in Italy to reach Rome. The apostle was attended by Aristarchus of Thessalonica and Luke, perhaps others; but as he now draws near the center of Roman power and glory, he feels a sense of depression. How can he, a fettered prisoner, subdue this vast stronghold of the world's life "to the obedience of Christ?" But a band of Roman Christians meet him at the Market of Appius, forty-three miles from the city, and another at the Three Taverns, ten miles farther on. He is greatly cheered, and enters the city with the step of a conqueror. Acts xxviii, 11-15.

He Approaches and Enters Rome.

Now, as your work is drawing to a close, is the time for unsparing toil. To have anything like a clear view of the history of the Apostolic Church is worth a large amount of sacrifice.

STUDY XX.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxvii, 25.

and courage when all were in despair, and breathing his courage into others, playing the part of a true Roman in a Roman ship, looked up to even by the centurion, and in his single self the savior of the lives of all."

STUDY XX.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxviii, 2.

Read Acts xxviii, 1-15. It should be observed that the word "barbarians" is used in ver. 2 in the special sense of those who do not have Greek culture. These people acted with "no uncommon kindness" rather than in a barbarous manner.

MINISTRY IN BONDS AND CLOSING COURSE
UNTIL MARTYRDOM.

STUDY XXI.—First Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxviii, 16.

Professor Ramsay has an interesting paragraph on the financial questions involved in Paul's residence at Cæſarea and Rome, his appeal to Cæſar, and his trial. He dwells upon the respect with which the apostle was treated by the Roman governors and King Agrippa, and by Drusilla and Bernice. By his appeal to the emperor he was undoubtedly choosing an expensive line of trial, but he weighed the cost, and reckoned the gain which would come to the Church if the supreme court pronounced in his favor. Then in Rome he was able to hire a lodging for himself and to live there, also maintaining, it is thought, the soldier who guarded him. It seems probable, therefore, that through death some inheritance had come to him, or he now felt justified in using such fortune as he possessed. Others have dwelt more upon the pathetic side of these years, but it is well to regard both aspects of the situation.

The point is also in debate as to where the apostle resided, or by what officer he was held in detention. The older view that it was the "captain of the guard,"¹ or "chief of the camp,"² meaning the Prætorian guard, may be replaced by the view that it was chief of the force serving as a link between the emperor and the army, in which Julius, who brought Paul to Rome, was an officer, having their camp on the Cælian Hill. This is the view of Mommsen.³ Acts xxviii, 16.

Witness to the Jews.

“After three days,” perhaps given to rest, prayer, and fellowship with the Church, Paul calls the chief men of the Jews together, that, as in other cities, he may first bear witness of Christ to them, before taking up work with the Gentiles. But the result is as it has been elsewhere, and he cites the solemn prophetic utterance of “the Holy Spirit through Isaiah,” which seals up the record of Israel on the whole as rejecting “this salvation of God.” Acts xxviii, 17–28.

End of Acts.
Paul's Work in Bonds.

The words which form a fitting close to this remarkable record of Acts are as follows: “And he abode two whole years in his own hired dwelling, and received all that went in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness, none forbidding him.” Luke, as the apostle’s physician and amanuensis, probably continued at his side. Visitors and delegates from various Churches brought presents and greetings. Trusted helpers carried on a vigorous and far-reaching campaign. Treasured letters were written to individuals and Churches, of which four, that to Philemon, and those to the Colossians, Ephesians, and Philippians, have come down to us as golden fruit of mature graces and powers. Such was the ministry “in bonds.” Acts xxviii, 30, 31.

His Trial, Release, Labors, Martyrdom.

“The trial seems to have occurred toward the end of A. D. 61.”¹ Rackham, in his fresh and masterly work, reaches this conclusion: “As a result of his trial, Paul was, in answer to his expectation, set at liberty; for there was no real case against him. This fact we infer from the Pastoral Epistles, which are much later in style than those of the imprisonment, and can nowhere be fitted into the apostle’s previous life.” This writer, with other eminent scholars, favors the view that after his release Paul resumed his missionary and apostolic labors until the persecution by Nero, when he was summoned to Rome and suffered martyrdom. “One day, in the winter of 64-65 A. D., he was led out on the Ostian Way and there beheaded . . . and his body was laid where now stands the Church of St. Paul Without-the-Walls."¹

The most helpful framework of Paul's last journeys is, perhaps, that presented by Professor Burton,² and which will be understood to have only the authority of early Church tradition, and the allusions in the later Epistles.

Framework of Last Journeys and Letters.

1. It is possible that he went to Asia and Macedonia in accordance with his expressed intention. Phil. ii, 24; Philemon 22.

2. He perhaps went to Spain. This had been at one time his intention, Rom. xv, 24, 28, and Clement of Rome, who wrote near the end of the first century, speaks of him as having come to the extremity of the West.

3. He returned to the East and visited Ephesus, where he left Timothy in charge. 1 Tim. i, 3.

4. He went into Macedonia; thence, or soon after leaving there, he wrote to Timothy. 1 Tim. i, 3.

5. He went from Macedonia to Miletus, stopping at Troas on the way. 2 Tim. iv, 13. At Miletus he left Trophimus. 2 Tim. iv, 20.

6. From Miletus he went to Crete, where he left Titus. Titus i, 5.

7. From Crete he went to Corinth, where he left Erastus, 2 Tim. iv, 20, and whence he probably wrote to Titus.

8. From Corinth he probably went to Nicopolis, Titus iii, 12, and it was quite possible that here he was arrested and sent to Rome.

9. In Rome he wrote Second Timothy, and here he was put to death.

The lesson of the week is important, not merely for its own sake, but as giving the historical setting of some of Paul's most important Epistles.

STUDY XXI.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Acts xxviii, 28.

Read Acts xxviii, 16-28. It may be said that the center of Christianity has now been transferred from the Jews to the Gentiles, from Jerusalem to Rome, and this failure of the Roman Jews to respond to the Gospel message is the final step.

STUDY XXI.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Phil. iv, 22.

Read Acts xxviii, 30, 31; Col. iv, 7-14; Phil. i, 12-14; iv, 22. In the full title, ver. 31, "the Lord Jesus Christ," it is no longer the historian, but Luke the believer who speaks. The allusions in the Roman Epistles give valuable side-lights on the apostle's activities, helpers, and influence during the two years of detention in Rome.

ONESIMUS THE CONVERTED SLAVE, AND PAUL
THE PERFECT CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN.

STUDY XXII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Philem. 10.

Paul's brief letter to Philemon is a proof of the charm which a great and loving nature lends to the simplest act of service. It discloses the sympathy, courtesy, and tact of the apostle, even his playfulness and wit, in a way to bring him near to every reader of the little Epistle and make his personality shine forth in its native beauty and attractiveness. As one turns from its perusal he can better understand why Paul's friends, and those brought to Christ through his labors, loved him so intensely; for he himself is a rare lover of others, and combines with this such sound sense and good taste, as to make him a perfect Christian gentleman. Professor Ramsay uses this phrase to express his mother's estimate of Paul, and states that his scholarly researches and studies brought him to the same conclusion. When he came at last really to know Paul, it was precisely the Paul his mother knew, and of whom she was always saying that he was such a perfect gentleman.

The Finer Qualities of Paul's Nature.

It is probable that Philemon, and his wife Apphia, were led into Christian faith during Paul's stay at Ephesus in his third missionary journey, and that later, their house at Colosse became a meeting-place for the young Church of that city. It is also supposed that Archippus was their son, and that he was a deacon, and a special helper of Paul. The family may have been in Ephesus for a time while Paul was there, and were marked for their charity, hospitality, wealth,¹ and willingness to promote the Christian cause. Ver. 1-7.

Philemon, Apphia, and Archippus.

¹Orr, Neglected Factors in . . . Early Progress of Christianity, 109, 110.

Onesimus. Onesimus was a slave, who, in running away from his master, Philemon, had, perhaps stolen that which would assist him in reaching Rome. Ver. 18. We know not through what sin and suffering he had passed, or by what means he met Paul and was converted. Ver. 10. "Helpful," according to his name, he had now become to his father in the gospel. But Tychicus is about to go to Colosse with Paul's letter to the Church. So he takes this letter to Philemon; and Onesimus, the slave convert, returns to his master, "no longer as a servant, but more than a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me," writes Paul, "but how much rather to thee, both in the flesh and in the Lord. If then thou countest me as a partner, receive him as myself." What gracious brotherliness is seen in "Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Christ Jesus," in asking Philemon to receive the runaway slave just as he would receive the apostle himself! Ver. 8-20.

The Epistle
pation.

When Paul adds, a little later, "Having confidence in thine obedience I write unto thee, knowing that thou wilt do beyond what I say," Lightfoot well remarks, "The word emancipation seems to be trembling on his lips." Christianity did not strike at the laws which maintained slavery, nor attempt directly to overturn the existing social conditions, but began to create a new spirit and feeling in the hearts of men, which sooner or later would be certain to abolish all human servitude. Therefore, beyond its beauty as an embodiment of Christian love and courtesy, this little Epistle has great value because "it is the first forecast of that noble literature of emancipation, which has seen its latest and fairest fruits within our own time. . . This little letter is the first note in that noble music that has found place in its orchestra for the strains of Chrysostom, Lincoln, Lowell, Longfellow, and Mrs. Beecher Stowe. It began disintegrating one of the greatest evils of society, and righting one of the most awful wrongs man can inflict upon his brother. Surely, therefore, it reflects the pure radiance of the cross."¹ In verse 22 the apostle speaks as if he were confident of being released after his trial and visiting Philemon. Then, with brief greetings and a benediction, the Epistle closes. Ver. 21-25.

As to the date of this and the associated letters, note Date. the following: "We may date these letters to Philemon, to Colossai, and to the Asian Churches generally (Ephesians) near the middle of the long imprisonment. . . For brevity's sake we may speak of their date as early in 61."²

Note how Paul, underneath all his courtesy and confidence, never allows himself to forget for a moment that Philemon has not been long out of heathenism, and that, accordingly, he must ply every motive to avoid the danger of his showing a harsh temper toward Onesimus.

STUDY XXII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Philem. 17.

Read Philem. 1-25. Note that Paul had to deal constantly with great practical problems. "A runaway slave appeals to him for freedom on the ground of that very religion whose pioneer he professed to be. The right to freedom was confessed and undoubted, but the needs of the Gentile world demanded that it should be postponed; Paul yielded to the Gentile need and inspired the runaway to return. . . Onesimus was not sent back but went back. Nothing could be more voluntary than his return to Philemon. All that Paul did was to expel his old nature, to give him a new will."³

PART V.—TWENTY-THIRD WEEK.

CHRIST EXALTED, ERRORS CORRECTED AT COLOSSE.

STUDY XXIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Col. i, 11.

Of the four Epistles written by Paul during his two years of detention at Rome, Philemon, Colossians, and Ephesians form a group, probably prepared in the early part of 61 A. D., and conveyed by Tychicus at one time to those for whom they were destined in Asia Minor. The two Epistles first named are linked together by the personal greetings in each, and by the fact that they both went to Colosse; and Colossians is connected with Ephesians by various points in its contents, and almost certainly by an express reference to that Epistle under the title, "The Epistle from Laodicea." Col. iv, 16.

Three
Epistles.

The great trade route eastward from Ephesus, after traversing a part of the valley of the Meander River, passed through the valley of its tributary, the Lycus. It was a region rich in flocks and noted for its fine wools. Three towns of the valley are mentioned in this Epistle—Hierapolis on the north side of the Lycus; Laodicea, on the south side; and, about a dozen miles to the east of these, Colosse. The last was dwindling in population at this period, while Laodicea was gaining and becoming wealthy. Some of Paul's converts in Ephesus may have gone to these smaller cities and helped to start the Christian movement, but it had been cared for and developed by Epaphras; and his report to Paul at Rome was doubtless the occasion of these Epistles. Col. i, 2, 7; ii, 1; iv, 12, 13.

Cities and Churches in the Lycus Valley.

Paul addresses the Colossians as "saints and . . . brethren," which is similar to the terms used in writing to the Romans and Ephesians, and may be chosen rather than the term "Church" in earlier letters, because he is not known personally to these Churches, and would at once express his kindly Christian regard. He is thankful for their faithful following of the gospel. He exalts Christ as "the image of the invisible God," and the head and source of the universe; "for in him were all things created in the heavens and upon the earth, things visible and things invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers; all things have been created through him, and unto him; and he is before all things, and in him all things consist." He is also head of the Church and pre-eminent in the order of spiritual life, "the first-born from the dead," "having made peace through the blood of his cross," to reconcile all things unto the Father, "whether things upon the earth, or things in the heavens." The Colossians have already begun to experience the power of this life, but the apostle yearns in suffering to see the full riches and mystery of the gospel fulfilled in them, that he "may present every man perfect in Christ." Col. i.

Christ
Exalted.

Errors to be Corrected.

A foundation is thus laid by which to correct the errors threatening the Church. These are of a new and peculiar type. In some respects they appear as the germ of the Gnostic doctrines which arose in later times. But other parts of the false teaching resemble the ideas of the Essenes and the Jewish Kabbala.¹ It was held that God is good, but matter is evil and the source of evil, and therefore the physical world could not come directly from God. It is separated from him by a great gulf, which is bridged by a chain of beings, half abstractions and half persons. The lowest of these have created the material universe and now govern it, and their favor is to be won by worship, and since matter is evil, all who would attain the higher stages of Christian life and enter into the "fullness" of spiritual privilege must overcome the material world by ascetic observances.

¹ C. H., II, 383-386; Godet, 432-434; Bartlet, 186; McClymont, 94.

The apostle saw that these were very dangerous errors, and he warns the Colossians against them. "Take heed lest there shall be any one that maketh spoil of you through his philosophy and vain deceit. . . . Let no man judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a feast-day or a new moon or a sabbath day. . . . Let no man rob you of your prize by a voluntary humility and worshiping of angels. . . . Why . . . do ye subject yourselves to ordinances," or rules of these teachers, such as, "Handle not, nor taste, nor touch?" Rather he would say, In Christ is the fullness, "and in him ye are made full." He has created the world, and in him it stands. It is not the source of evil: use it to his glory. He fills all the space between God and man, and is supreme over all gradations of angels: do not fear nor worship them. In him are hidden "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge:" be "rooted and builded up in him, and established in your faith." Col. ii—iii, 4.

Apostolic Warning and True Teaching.

The practical part of the Epistle, and the closing directions and personal greetings are especially rich and full of suggestion, and will be noticed in the constructive readings. Col. iii, 5—iv.

Closing Portions of the Epistle.

The reader must guard against the feeling of hopeless discouragement that comes at first to the student of this complicated Epistle. He will do well if he strive for some one definite thing, say a clear conception of its practical aim. By so doing its unity and real intelligibility will ere long break upon his mind.

STUDY XXIII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Col. i, 16.

Read Col. i, 1-23. Note the order of thought: through Christ was creation; through him is reconciliation. "What does it avail for us that the far-reaching power of Christ's cross shoots out magnetic forces to the uttermost verge of the heavens, and binds the whole universe by silken blood-red cords to God, if it does not bind me to him in love and longing?"¹

STUDY XXIII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Col. ii, 6.

Read Col. i, 24—ii, 7. Mark how greatly the apostle is drawn out even toward a Church that he has not founded. "His sufferings," ver. 24, are regarded as filling up "the afflictions of Christ," in the sense that what Christ's members suffer, he suffers by his oneness with them as Head of the Church and by his sympathy.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

An enlarged map of the region and route from Ephesus to Colosse, and a study of the situation at Colosse, Laodicea, and Hierapolis, amid the Alpine scenery of valley and mountain, will be interesting.²

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Salutation, Col. i, 1, 2; thanksgiving, 3-8; the pre-eminence of Christ, 9-23; Paul's sufferings and solicitude, i, 24—ii, 7; correction of errors, ii, 8—iii, 4; old life to be put off, iii, 5-11; new life to be put on, 12-17; Christian family life, iii, 18—iv, 1; prayerful requests and commendations, 2-9, 16, 17; personal greetings and benediction, 10-15, 18.

STUDY XXIII.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Col. iii, 1.

Read Col. ii, 8—iii, 4. "The first two chapters of this letter . . . contain thoughts unsurpassed in all Paul's writings for the depth of their spiritual wisdom. These Asiatics were lovers of knowledge." The apostle meets their desires. "There is no book of the New Testament that will better repay careful study."³ Apply the passage set for to-day to spiritualism, theosophy, and kindred errors of our time.

Personal Thought.

“Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.” Col. iv, 6.

By nothing is a disciple of Christ more clearly marked than by his use of the gift of speech; not merely the negative power of control and restraint, but the positive influence of Christ dwelling within, so that every word from the lips may be “with grace.”

Are your words always filled with the grace of good cheer and thoughtful love? Are they seasoned with the “salt” of purity, reverence, and truth?

THE IDEAL OF THE CHURCH.

STUDY XXIV.—First Day. Memory Verse, Eph. i, 3.

Colossians and Ephesians have been called “twin Epistles, the offspring of a single birth in the apostle’s mind. . . . At the same time, there is a considerable difference between the two writings. . . . Colossians is a letter of discussion; Ephesians of reflection. . . . The one is like a mountain stream forcing its way through some rugged defile; the other is the smooth lake below, in which its chafed waters restfully expand.”¹

Ephesians and Colossians Contrasted.

No other of Paul’s productions has called forth such expressions of praise from every quarter as has this Epistle to the Ephesians. Coleridge declares it to be “one of the divinest compositions of man.” “It rises at times to the level of a poem,” says Locke. “When Paul wrote this letter he was, as at Philippi, singing hymns in prison.” Purves writes, “This Epistle is the climax of Paul’s teaching about salvation. . . . The whole plan of God embodied in the mission of Jesus is unfolded.”

Praise of the Epistle.

This last thought gives the key to the Epistle. It is the final and highest illustration of Paul’s wonderful passion for the absolute or universal. He pushes every great truth to its utmost limits. In Galatians it is justification by faith; in Romans, salvation through the sacrifice of Christ fully realized by the operation of the Spirit; in Colossians, the pre-eminence of Christ; in this Epistle God’s plan of the ages, the mystery of Christ as the head and the Church as his body. The Church has its origin in the will of the Father, in the work of the Son, in the sealing of the Holy Spirit;² and in each it is “unto the praise of his [God’s] glory.” The apostle gives thanks for the faith and love of his readers, and prays that their knowledge may become even more complete respecting their privileges and the power of God. This power is seen in the resurrection and ascension of Christ, his supremacy over all things, and headship over the Church. Eph. i.

The Church a Holy Temple.

This power of God is further seen in raising both Gentiles and Jews from spiritual death, causing them to sit with Christ in the higher or heavenly relationships of this new life of grace, to be “created in Christ Jesus for good works,” and to be united in one vast and “holy temple in the Lord.” Eph. ii.

Paul’s Mission and Prayer.

To Paul has been revealed this mystery of Christ’s marvelous mission, and especially “that the Gentiles are fellow-heirs, and fellow-members of the body.” This revelation and the gift of God’s grace have made him “a minister” and a preacher of “the unsearchable riches of Christ,” and as such he is led to pray that those to whom he writes may be brought by glorious steps to the point where they may “know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge,” and be “filled unto all the fullness of God,” and he closes the doctrinal part of the Epistle with this sublime doxology: “Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the Church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations for ever and ever. Amen.” Eph. iii.

Beginning of the Practical Part.

The exhortation or practical part fills a larger place than in other letters, its three chapters even exceeding the first three by twenty-three verses. It opens with an appeal to the whole Church to live worthy of the great ideal which has been presented to them, and especially to endeavor “to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.” Yet it is shown to be a unity rich in diversity of gifts and ministry. Their life is to be a reversal of the old Gentile type, and marked by truthfulness, control of anger, honest toil, pure and upbuilding speech and conduct, gentleness, forgiveness, and love. They are to "walk as children of light," to "redeem the time, because the days are evil," not to be "drunken with wine, wherein is riot, but be filled with the Spirit; speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody . . . to the Lord." Eph. iv—v, 21.

The next practical section considers the mutual relations and duties of the three classes of the social order—wives and husbands, children and parents, servants and masters. But these may all be viewed as making up the complete idea of the family. In Romans, the chief Controversial Epistle, Paul brings the State under Christian thought. Here, in the main Prison Epistle, he does the same with the Family. Eph. v, 22—vi, 9.

Christian Family Life.

The last section presents the spiritual foes which surround the Christian, and describes the armor and weapons with which they can be resisted. The apostle then asks for prayer on his behalf, that he may have the power of utterance as "an ambassador in chains," Tychicus is introduced, and the benediction is given. Eph. vi, 10—24.

Spiritual Armor.

Do not let the week with the Epistle to the Ephesians pass without making some one of its remarkable passages your permanent possession.

STUDY XXIV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Eph. i, 4.

Read Eph. i. Note that the margin, ver. 1, R. V., states that "some very ancient authorities omit at Ephesus." This is thought to show that this Epistle was meant to be a circular letter, and that the name of each Church to which a copy was given, or at which a copy was made, was inserted here. For this reason Col. iv, 16 could speak of "the Epistle from Laodicea," which was their copy of the Epistle. Ephesus being the metropolis of this circle finally gave name to the letter.

STUDY XXIV.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Eph. ii, 10.

Read Eph. ii. Mark the many times that the phrase "in Christ," or its equivalent, occurs through these chapters. It is one of the great ideas or keynotes of the Epistle and of Paul's thought, both here and elsewhere.

PART V.—TWENTY-FIFTH WEEK.

PAUL'S JOY IN THE PHILIPPIANS.

STUDY XXV.—First Day. Memory Verse, Phil. i, 9.

The founding of the Church at Philippi occurred in Paul's second missionary journey as recounted in Study X. The apostle again visited Philippi during the latter part of the third missionary journey, very probably on his way to Corinth, and certainly on his return. Acts xx, 6. It is supposed that two other visits were made by him to the Church in the period after his release from the two years of detention at Rome.¹

Paul's Visits to Philippi.

Philippi received its name from King Philip of Macedonia in the fourth century B. C., and was granted large privileges under Roman rule by Augustus because of victories at the battles of Philippi and Actium. Paul was drawn to it as the first place of labor in his Macedonian mission by the fact that it was so largely Roman. There were few Jewish residents, since they had no synagogue, and the instance of Lydia at the beginning of the Church and the reference to Enodia and Syntyche in the Epistle indicate a fine womanly element. "In a woman's prayer-meeting began the first Church in Europe, the most loved and loving Church of the New Testament. Paul was its founder, Luke its first pastor, but a band of noble women seem to have furnished the core of its membership."—Dr. George Elliott.

The City and

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the Epistle to the Philippians preceded or followed the other letters of the imprisonment, but the order in which they have been presented shows the latter view is here accepted, and the letter may be dated toward the end of 61 A. D.

The occasion of the writing of this message of personal affection and joy was the coming of Epaphroditus with an offering from the Philippian Church for Paul's own use. This loving remembrance from a Church that apparently never caused its founder any anxiety led him to respond in a strain of familiar confidence, and Philippians fittingly closes the series of "afternoon" Epistles, as those written from Rome have been called.

Chapter.

The salutation, in which Timothy joins with Paul, is distinct from that of any previous Epistle in its reference to "the bishops and deacons," forming a point of transition to the Pastoral Epistles which are to follow. The thanksgiving and prayer reveal the tender sympathies and unceasing desires of the apostle for the growth of his spiritual children in love and discernment. He then bears personal testimony to the great truth he stated in Romans, that "all things work together for good." "I would have you know, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the progress of the gospel, so that my bonds became manifest in Christ throughout the whole pretorian guard, and to all the rest; and that most of the brethren in the Lord, being confident through my bonds, are more abundantly bold to speak the word of God without fear." He is able to rejoice that Christ is preached by some, even though they do it "of faction." He is confident that Christ will be magnified whether by his life or death, but believes that he is to be spared to see the Philippians again, though to depart and be with Christ is "very far better." His wish is that they may stand fast in unity and readiness to suffer for Christ's sake, following his own example. Phil. i.

The Mind of Christ.

In the next chapter is found one of the most deeply impressive passages of the entire Bible,—that in which Paul brings before the disciples at Philippi the example of Christ as he "emptied himself" in becoming man, and "humbled himself" in enduring "the death of the cross." It is another illustration of the loftiness of the motives to which Paul is ever appealing on behalf of the simplest duties and virtues. Here he asks that Christians may have "the mind of Christ," that they may "work out" their salvation, that they may "do all things without murmurings and disputings," and that they may hold forth "the word of life." The chapter closes with kindly personal thoughts and suggestions respecting Timothy and Epaphroditus. Phil. ii.

Paul now passes over to the ground of faithful warning against the influence of those who exalt fleshly ceremonies and fleshly indulgences. "Beware of the circumcision: for we are the circumcision, who worship by the Spirit of God, and glory in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh." . . . "Many walk, of whom I told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: . . . whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things." As over against these he declares, "What things were gain to me, these have I counted loss for Christ. . . . I press on toward the goal of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. . . . For our citizenship is in heaven." Phil. iii.

Warnings and the Right Alm.

With a caution to all to "stand fast in the Lord," and especially to Euodia and Syntyche "to be of the same mind in the Lord," the apostle utters, with more emphasis than ever, the great watchword of the Epistle, "Rejoice in the Lord always: again I will say, Rejoice." Then, with words of rare beauty respecting peace through prayer, the realm in which Christian thought should dwell, his grateful recognition of their present gift and their past generosity, and assurance that God shall supply their "every need . . . according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus," he brings the letter to a close. Phil. iv.

Rejoice, Pray, Think Nobly.

It is well for the Bible student to have one Epistle in which he is a kind of specialist. The Epistle to the Philippians is especially well adapted to all classes of readers. Some will wish to make choice of it, reading it over month after month, until they are literally saturated with its great thoughts and glad and joyful spirit.

STUDY XXV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Phil. i, 10.

Read Phil. i, 1-11. Note, at the end of ver. 4, the word "joy," which is the keynote of the Epistle. In ver. 9-11 occurs another of the remarkable series of prayers to be found through Paul's Epistles, and of which a special study should be made.

STUDY XXV.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Phil. i, 21.

Read Phil. i, 12-30. In ver. 18 are the words, "Christ is proclaimed;" in ver. 20, "Christ shall be magnified." How true are these as the constant refrain of this letter. Says one writer: "The mere number of mentions of the Savior's name is remarkable. More than forty times we have it in this short compass . . . on an average about once in every two or three verses."¹

TITUS, A COMRADE IN LABORS.

STUDY XXVI.—First Day. Memory Verse, Titus.

The last three Epistles of Paul are called Pastoral Epistles, because they are full of precepts for the pastor or minister. If the simple device of classifying all his Epistles is now summed up and completed, it may be said that First and Second Thessalonians are morning Epistles; Galatians, First and Second Corinthians, and Romans are noon Epistles; Philemon, Colossians, Ephesians, and Philippians are afternoon Epistles; and Titus and First and Second Timothy are evening Epistles. When the last are being written the evening shadows are falling about his life. Some, like Bartlet, have sought to place the pastoral letters in the apostle's history before the close of Acts, but this is generally felt to be impossible. They contain so many words new to Paul's vocabulary that time and a certain change of conditions are required to account for them. And this is secured if Paul was released from his first imprisonment, went forth to further labors and journeys, and suffered a second imprisonment before his death.

The Pastoral Epistles.

In 2 Cor. viii, 23, Paul calls Titus his "partner" or "comrade," using a word which means one with the truest fellow-feeling, and joins to this the word "fellow-worker," so that it may be proper to term him Paul's "comrade in labors." But Titus was a much younger man than the apostle, probably converted through him, and in the salutation of the Epistle is addressed as his "true child." Nothing is known of his early life. He is first mentioned in Gal. ii, 1-3, as a Gentile going up with Paul and Barnabas to Jerusalem, and yet not circumcised, perhaps as an example that such could be accepted Christians. Later on he is with Paul in the third missionary journey at Ephesus, and is sent to Corinth, as nearly as can be determined, with each of three letters, the two extant Epistles and an intermediate one;¹ and appears to have succeeded in his efforts there much better than Timothy. He organized the plan for the collection for the poor, and did much to restore the Corinthian Church to allegiance to Paul. His coming to Macedonia with this good news brought the apostle great joy.² The next reference to Titus is in the letter to him. It seems that Paul, after his release, had traveled with Titus in the East, that they had been in the Island of Crete, and had evangelized several towns. Being unable to remain longer, the aged missionary leader had left Titus to appoint elders and complete the organization of the Church. But Titus found no little opposition, and may have written Paul for advice, which was given in this letter. The last meeting of Paul with his younger helper was probably at Nicopolis in Epirus, and when Titus went from there "to Dalmatia," he disappears from our further knowledge.³

Sketch of Titus.

Circumstances of this Epistle.

The first letter to Timothy was probably written before the Epistle to Titus, but it will be considered with the second letter to Timothy in the next Study. The letter to Titus may have been prepared at Corinth in the summer of 64 A. D., and sent to Crete by Zenas and Apollos.³ The salutation, which is peculiarly strong and of such length as to suggest that of the Epistle to the Romans, would add force to the commission of Titus. The first work of this delegate was to be the proper organizing of the Christians in the several cities of Crete, and the appointment of elders. The term "bishop" is also used for these Church officers, and their qualifications are pointed out. In contrast with the true leaders and overseers of the Churches, there are false teachers, "whose mouths must be stopped." Paul cites a current saying from Epimenides respecting Cretans as appropriate to these men, and directs that they be sharply reproved. Titus i.

The apostle then sketches the features of a true Christian character which Titus is to enforce in both elderly and young men and women and in household servants or slaves. The wonderful ideal is presented respecting the last mentioned, that "they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things." No higher measure of the new standard of Christianity could be given. And the motive urged is because the saving grace of God and Christ's atonement have trained us to rise above sin and lead an attractive life, "zealous of good works." Titus ii.

Standard of
Character.

Titus is to remind the people "to be in subjection to rulers, to authorities, to be obedient, to be ready unto every good work, to speak evil of no man, not to be contentious, to be gentle, showing all meekness toward all men." For God's loving kindness has transformed, "through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit," the believers from the old heathen life of hatred to a new life of righteousness, so that they are bound to set a noble example. Titus himself is to avoid foolish questionings and to exclude those who will not listen to admonition. The letter closes with personal directions, salutations, and a brief benediction. Titus iii.

Special Directions and Precepts.

The Epistle to Titus was written to a generation that had begun to put the emphasis in religion on theory and speculation. See if by the end of the week you can not express in a single sentence the thought that will epitomize all its exhortations.

STUDY XXVI.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Titus i, 5.

Read Titus i, 1-9. In ver. 5, it may be noted that Crete is one hundred and fifty-six miles from east to west and varies from thirty to seven miles in width. It was fertile and thickly populated, and reputed to have one hundred cities. The inhabitants were mountaineers, sailors, tradesmen, and noted for their untruthfulness. There were many Jews in the island, and some of these may have brought a measure of Christian light from Jerusalem at the time of Pentecost, and beginnings of Churches may have existed in a number of cities before the visit of Paul and Titus.

STUDY XXVI.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Titus i, 15.

Read Titus i, 10-16. Paul's young representative doubtless had a hard task before him in Crete, as this passage shows, but he had revealed his capacity to succeed in a most difficult situation at Corinth, and he must have been a person of firmness, discretion, and tact.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

Make a map of Crete, Western Asia Minor, Greece, Macedonia, Dalmatia (which lay just north of Lissus along the Adriatic), and Italy, and mark the course of Paul and Titus from Miletus to Crete; of Paul from Crete to Corinth, Nicopolis, and Rome; and of Titus from Crete to Nicopolis and Dalmatia, in accordance with outline in Study XXI, Narrative 6-9. See either map, or map in Ramsay.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Salutation, Titus i, 1-4; Appointment and qualifications of elders, 5-9; False teachers exposed, 10-16; Standard and motive for Christian character and conduct, ii; Relations to the government and to non-Christians, iii, 1-8; Personal directions for Titus, and closing salutations and benediction, 9-15.

STUDY XXVI.—Fourth Day. Memory Verse, Titus ii, 12.

Read Titus ii. "St. Paul knew what he was about when he urged Titus to commit the adorning of the doctrine of God in a special manner to slaves. . . . There must be something in a religion which out of such unpromising material as slaves could make obedient, gentle, honest, sober, and chaste men and women. . . . What slaves could do then we all can do now. We can prove to all for whom and with whom we work that we really do believe and endeavor to live up to the faith that we profess."¹

Read Titus iii, 1-11. Note that the teaching of ver. 5 is similar to that of John iii, 5, 8, where our Lord, in coupling the water and the Spirit together, asserts the supremacy of the Spirit, and denies the efficacy of the water unless the Holy Spirit be the source of a new birth.²

TIMOTHY, A SON IN THE GOSPEL.

STUDY XXVII.—First Day. Memory Verse, 2 Tim. i, 5.

Timothy (in Greek, Timotheus) was the one person among those associated with St. Paul who held the deepest and most constant place in his affections. Reared in a home of piety, his father, who was a Greek or Gentile, perhaps having died while the boy was young, he felt the influence of Jewish faith from his earliest years through his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice. He appears to have been of a gentle and retiring nature, and of delicate constitution or health. His conversion is thought to have occurred while Paul and Barnabas were at Lystra in the First Missionary Journey,¹ and as they were designated for this mission by prophetic utterance at Antioch, so this young disciple was pointed out for the companionship of Paul by a similar utterance at Derbe or Lystra. Accordingly, when Paul and Silas came to Lystra in the Second Journey it was decided that young Timothy should go with them, and to overcome Jewish prejudice the apostle circumcised him,² and he was ordained to the work by the laying on of hands of the elders.

Timothy's
Early Preparation.

The principal journeys and labors of Timothy can be traced from the record of Acts and the Pauline Epistles. He accompanied the apostolic party in the Second Journey till Philippi was reached. Later he remained behind with Silas at Berea, joined Paul at Athens, and was his messenger from there and Corinth in the interests of the Macedonian work. He probably was the penman for the writing of the two Thessalonian letters, and his name appears with Paul's in the salutation of each of them, as it does in the Second Epistle to the Corinthians and the Epistles to Philemon, Colossians, and Philippians, and he is among those giving closing salutations in Romans. During the Third Journey he is sent from Ephesus to Corinth, and is a member of the company going up to Jerusalem. He is with Paul during at least a part of the first Roman imprisonment, and is left in charge at Ephesus for a time in the interval before the second imprisonment.¹ Whether he was able to respond to the final urgent call of the apostle and see him in Rome before Paul's martyrdom is not known. "The constant companion of his travels when he was not engaged in his commissions, this son of his was never absent but he wished him present. . . . It is this tender love of the noblest of men which illustrates the character of Timothy; to be so loved by Paul is a patent of nobility."²

Date and Beginning of First Timothy.

The First Epistle to Timothy, which was perhaps sent from Macedonia in the summer of 63 A. D.,³ may be briefly surveyed. After the salutation in the first two verses, the opening chapter is taken up with points relating to doctrine and teaching. Paul especially warns against "fables and endless genealogies which minister questionings," and vain attempts to present the law without using it for its true end in correcting sins and wickedness. He humbly makes mention of the exceeding mercy of Christ to himself as the chief of sinners, in appointing him to his service, and charges Timothy to "war a good warfare; holding faith and a good conscience," respecting which Hymenæus and Alexander are condemned. 1 Tim. i.

Its Further Topics.

He proceeds to speak of prayers, and the relation of men and women thereto and to public teaching; of bishops, deacons, and perhaps deaconesses under the more general term "women;" and comes to the central climax of the Epistle in a brief statement of the office of the Church in maintaining the truth. A fragment of a hymn seems to be quoted as summing up Christ's entire mission.¹ The last half of the letter is more nearly concerned with personal instructions to Timothy to enlighten him as to coming forms of error, and show how he can be "a good minister of Jesus Christ" with respect to his public utterances; to his treatment of old and young; to the Church care of widows; to the eldership; to the Christian conduct of slaves, and to the spirit and aim of the rich. 1 Tim. ii—vi.

Date and Contents of Second Timothy.

The Second Epistle to Timothy was written at Rome, probably in the winter of 64-5 A. D., shortly before Paul's martyrdom.² The apostle's first thought appears to be of Timothy's early training and ordination to the work, and of the spirit of power and courage he now needs to come to Rome and stand beside his leader, as Onesiphorus has done, in contrast with others. Soldier-like qualities are required, but the one who measures up to the Divine standard will be "a vessel unto honor." Over against false teachers of the future are placed the inspired Scriptures. Paul then gives his triumphant testimony, and his final request to Timothy to come to him, and the letter closes with various directions and greetings. 2 Tim. i—iv.

The student may well ponder Paul's great claim for the Scripture, 2 Tim. iii, 16, 17, first on its negative and then on its positive side. He does not claim that it is a book of inspired science or chronology, but he does claim that it is all-sidedly and tremendously practical as an aid to a complete life and a broad usefulness.

the most impressive utterances in the history of religion, whether you consider the writer or its date."

STUDY XXVII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, 1 Tim. iv, 8.

Read 1 Tim. iii, 14—iv. Without question there are difficulties connected with Paul's utterances respecting woman's place and part, both in this Epistle, ii, 11-14, and in 1 Cor. xi and xiv. Further time and fuller light may solve these difficulties, as has been true of the apostle's apparent attitude respecting slavery. Then he has said, and appears to sanction, much of woman's ministering and even teaching service. See Acts xviii, 26; xxi, 9; Gal. iii, 28; 1 Cor. xi, 5, 10; xvi, 1-3, 12; Phil. iv, 2, 3; Titus ii, 3; 2 Tim. iii, 14, 15. "One of the most distinctive elements in Paul's Christian experience was the recognition of the claims of woman; in nothing is he more sharply distinguished from his Jewish countrymen."¹

THE CHURCH INSTRUCTED BY PETER AND JUDE.

TWENTY-EIGHTH WEEK.

PETER THE MAN AND WRITER OF LARGE HEART AND HOPE.

STUDY XXVIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, 1 Peter i, 3.

The Epistles of Peter not only introduce a portion of the New Testament distinct from the large field of Pauline life and literature over which the course has passed, but complete the circle of action, speech, and writing of the next most influential man of the Apostolic Church. A brief review of his life and work is therefore presented. He first appears in the gospel narrative as a disciple of John the Baptist, brought to Jesus by his brother Andrew, and given his new name of Peter, or Cephas in Aramaic, meaning a rock or stone. A few months later these two brothers and their partners, James and John, are called to leave their boats and nets and follow Christ. They form the core of the college of twelve apostles, and Peter becomes the leading disciple. He appears as somewhat slow of understanding and unstable in temperament, but wholehearted, prompt, and bold in word and action. After his great confession of Christ's Messiahship, his office as prime leader in the new Church was confirmed, and though he gave way to fear and denied his Lord before the crucifixion, he was restored after the resurrection.

Peter's Writings and Life.

At Cæsarea Philippi, Peter had declared concerning his Master, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and Jesus had responded, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church; . . . I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."¹ Even if it were understood that Peter himself, rather than his confession, is "this rock," all the above-quoted words to him find true and sufficient fulfillment in his preaching the first sermon at Pentecost and opening the Christian way of salvation to the Jews, Samaritans, and Gentiles.² He so fully directed the first stage of the Christian movement that Acts i—xii may be called "The Acts of Peter."³ But about 44 A. D., James, the Lord's brother, appears as leader of the Church at Jerusalem, and Peter's work was abroad, though he is present at the Jerusalem Council in 50 A. D.

His Later
Martyrdom.

His further career is, for the most part, disclosed only in the uncertain light of early tradition. Perhaps the best conclusion is that he labored chiefly throughout Syria for some years after leaving Jerusalem, visited the provinces of Asia Minor, and spent his last years in Rome.⁴ Says Rackham, 511, 512, "This apostle, after evangelizing the remaining provinces of Asia Minor, may have come to Rome after St. Paul's liberation. . . . We have St. Peter's First Epistle which he wrote from Rome and sent to the Christians of Asia Minor by the hands of Silvanus. . . . When this was written the Christians of Asia Minor were suffering persecution, and we should naturally assume that their persecution followed after the outbreak of persecution at Rome. St. Peter, then, was probably lying hid in Rome; and if, by so doing, he was able to cherish fragments of the broken Church and to build it up again and appoint an apostolic successor, we shall better understand the position which St. Peter won in tradition of being the founder of the Church of Rome. Ultimately, however, he was discovered by the authorities; and, not being a Roman citizen, was put to death by crucifixion in the Vatican gardens beyond the Tiber. If this happened in 67 or early in 68, it would account for the date assigned to the martyrdom of both apostles [Paul and Peter] by Eusebius."

Like the Epistle of James and those which are to follow, the First Epistle of Peter belongs in the list of General or Catholic Epistles, so called because most of them are addressed to Christians in general or groups of Churches. This Epistle is addressed "to the elect who are sojourners of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." The list of provinces may have been used to cover Asia Minor, for which there was then no one name. While there were doubtless Jewish Christians in the Churches of this great district, "all considerations point decisively to the conclusion that St. Peter had in his mind predominantly, though probably not exclusively, Gentile readers."¹ After the salutation the author expresses gratitude for the Christian hope and inheritance, though present faith is attended with trial. Salvation in Christ, a mystery even to prophets and angels, is now fully proclaimed by those who minister the gospel through the Holy Spirit. Therefore let the readers be steadfast and aim at a holy life and see that they "love one another with a pure heart fervently; being born again, . . . by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." 1 Peter i. Christ is to them "a chief corner-stone, elect, precious," but to the disobedient "a stone of stumbling." Before those who are without, Christians are to be "honest" in their course of life and manifest their "good works." They are to "Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king." Slaves, following the example of Christ's sufferings, are to glorify God, even under evil masters. 1 Peter ii. Counsels are given wives and husbands, and all are exhorted to be compassionate, tender-hearted and humble, and patiently to endure persecutions, since Christ, though "put to death in the flesh," has been "made alive in the spirit," and to him they are now joined by baptism. 1 Peter iii. The closing chapters deal largely with the same problem of triumph over tribulation, the elders are admonished, and the letter closes with brief personal allusions and greetings and a benediction. 1 Peter iv, v.

It will be an excellent plan to read the letter through rapidly, and then state in one sentence what conditions those to whom it was written seem to have been facing. You will then be prepared to state its main practical purpose.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

In the order of the provinces in the salutation some find a suggestion of the course of Silvanus in delivering the Epistle; and would make his course from Pontus into North Galatia, thence to Cappadocia, through South Galatia to Ephesus, and north through the province of Asia to Bithynia.¹ Draw a map of Asia Minor and its provinces, and mark out the above route. STUDY XXVIII.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, 1 Peter iv, 16.

Read 1 Peter iv. That Peter is the man and writer of large heart or catholicity is seen in the fact that students observe in this Epistle many points of connection with both the Epistle of James and the Epistles of Paul, especially the letters to the Romans and Ephesians, Paul's two most general Epistles. Peter's very breadth of soul and openness to new light led him who was once head of the narrow Jewish Church in Jerusalem to relinquish it to James and to become finally, not the autocrat, but the loving builder and guide of the Church in Rome, and to enter into Paul's views and labors.

STUDY XXVIII.—Sixth Day. Memory Verses, 1 Peter v, 6, 7.

Read 1 Peter v. This Epistle may be dated about 65 or 66 A. D.; for Rome, by Nero's persecution and Paul's martyrdom in 64-65, has become "Babylon,"¹ ver. 13, and the apostle sends forth this message to strengthen the Christians in view of the new conditions that are arising.²

Questions for Written Answers.

1. Write down in brief outline all you can remember of Peter's life and work.
2. Name the General or Catholic Epistles.
3. To what large district is First Peter directed?
4. What facts may show Peter's breadth of spirit?
5. Which of the three chief Christian graces appear to be prominent with this apostle?

TWO KINDRED WRITERS ARRAIGN CURRENT EVILS.

STUDY XXIX.—First Day. Memory Verse, 2 Peter i, 4.

The Second Epistle of Peter and the Epistle of Jude are linked together by the fact that many passages or phrases in 2 Peter ii, 1—iii, 3, and Jude 4—18 are so nearly the same that one writer must have known the letter of the other and received from it thought and language. Which one has done this is not easily determined, and the views of scholars differ as to whether Second Peter or Jude was written first. Second Peter is the one writing of the New Testament about which there remains considerable question as to its being the work of the author to whom it is ascribed. But that it is a genuine Epistle of Peter is held by able scholars who would date it before the Epistle of Jude.¹ It is true that some of these would place it earlier than First Peter, regarding it as written to Jewish Christians of Syria about 62 A. D., shortly before Peter went to Rome. In this case the allusion in 2 Peter iii, 1, which implies a former Epistle, would have reference to an Epistle now lost. Others would hold that Second Peter was written from Rome not long after First Peter, perhaps about 67 A. D.

The Epistle of Jude gained very early and strong approval considering its brevity; but no thought seems to have been given in primitive times to the person of its author. However, it is now agreed on all hands that Jude was a brother of James, the head of the Church in Jerusalem. He therefore belonged to the family of our Lord, and is the Judas mentioned in the list of Christ's brothers in the Gospels. As a younger brother, he modestly subscribes himself "a brother of James." Yet much deference was paid to the relatives of Christ in the early Church. The letter of Jude is now dated by most writers about 70 to 80 A. D.¹

Evils Arraigned. The two Epistles bear witness to the presence of evils, not wholly new, but intensified by the character of those in whom they are embodied. A lawless tendency appears. Men professedly members of the Christian communities, but with views so perverted that they divorce faith and conduct, or else men utterly false and designing, who covertly make their way into the Churches as offering a field for their wickedness, fill both writers with alarm and indignation. Impurity, self-assertion, railing, wanton and luxurious living, and covetousness are the evils chiefly arraigned.

Peter's Assurance of Truth. After the salutation, the writer of Second Peter calls on his readers to go on in the power of God's promises and their communion with the Divine nature, from one grace of character to another. Such progress is the condition of knowledge, and without it there is mental blindness and defect. The author's decease "cometh swiftly," but he "will give diligence," possibly through the future letter of Jude, to provide for their remembrance of his instructions. Christ "received from God the Father honor and glory," he adds, "when we were with him in the holy mount. . . . No prophecy ever came by the will of man; but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." 2 Peter i.

He Describes the Coming Ungodly. "But there arose false prophets also among the people, as among you also there shall be false teachers, who shall privily bring in destructive heresies." It has been observed that the language of Peter here and in chapter iii, 3, is predictive of the false teachers and mockers, while in Jude they have appeared. With vivid phrases and strong comparisons he reveals and condemns the corrupt life and evil purposes of these pretenders. 2 Peter ii.

He next reminds the readers of his previous letter, and asks them to cherish the words of the apostles and prophets of the Church respecting the coming of Christ. Scoffers would taunt them with the delay of his coming. But the world had once perished with water, and it was not impossible that it might hereafter be destroyed by fire. Therefore let them seek fitness for a new world. Their own teacher, Paul, whom the writer owns as a beloved brother, wrote likewise of these things, "as also in all his Epistles, . . . wherein are some things hard to be understood," and therefore, like the other Scriptures, liable to perversion. But, being forewarned, let them "grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Peter iii.

He Confirms Faith in Christ's Coming.

Jude states that he has been moved by the dangers of the time to write those addressed "to contend earnestly for the faith . . . delivered unto the saints." Ungodly men are "turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness." Their sins are after the pattern of those of Cain, Balaam, and Korah. They even mingle in the love-feasts with impure purposes. Added to these, the apostles have said, "In the last time there shall be mockers, walking after their own ungodly lusts. These are they who make separations, sensual, having not the Spirit." The readers are urged to build themselves up in faith, prayer, and love, and to seek the rescue of others; and the brief letter ends with praise to God as able to guard the Christian from stumbling, and to set him "before the presence of his glory without blemish in exceeding joy." Jude 1-25.

THE CHURCH INSTRUCTED BY THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS, THE SYNOPSIS GOSPELS, AND ACTS.

THIRTIETH WEEK.

CHRISTIANITY FRESHLY PUT BY AN UNKNOWN WRITER.

STUDY XXX.—First Day. Memory Verse, Heb. i, 4.

The second word in the original of the Epistle to the Hebrews, which means “in many modes,” can be used respecting the New Testament writers as well as those of the Old. Already the Studies have shown that the Church was instructed by writers of Epistles representing at least three different modes of thought—(1) James and Jude, (2) Peter, (3) Paul. The Holy Spirit regards the individuality of each writer. So clearly is this true, that, though Paul was counted for centuries the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, he is no longer so counted. The scholars of to-day are not able to fix upon the author of this Epistle, but they are sure it is not Paul. “Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to who the author really was, the belief that he was Paul is practically abandoned.”¹

Many Modes
In Divine Revelation.

Why has there been such a change of view? Because the body of Christian thinkers have been led to see that the Epistle is a fresh putting of Christianity. It is a remarkable and masterful composition, treating the Christian system in such a comprehensive way that it takes its place beside the synoptic Gospels, the Pauline Epistles, or the writings of John. It is in complete harmony with the mode in which Paul puts Christianity, but it is different, and the wonder is that this fact was not discovered earlier. As to its style, every sentence is carefully finished, every period exactly balanced, while Paul is notable for digressions, and variations from a regular order. Hebrews is calm, Paul intense; he has passed through a great religious crisis, the author of Hebrews has not. The latter has derived his Christian knowledge from disciples of the Lord; Paul from Christ himself. With Paul the Law is moral requirement, convicting of sin, but powerless to give the soul deliverance; with the writer of Hebrews, Law is the priestly and temple ritual, typical of Christianity, a lower gospel leading the worshiper onward into its antitype, the final and perfect religion. Paul sees the risen Christ, and the believer created anew "in him;" the author of Hebrews sees the ascended Christ, and the disciple coming to him as high priest, or following his example, as Son of the Father and "forerunner" into the heavenly sanctuary.

Suggestions as to the Author.

Of those who have been suggested as the author of the Epistle, Barnabas was named by Tertullian, and is favored by a strong list of modern writers, as is also Apollos, prominently brought forward by Luther. A recent and surprising theory is that by Harnack, who suggests that the letter may have come from Priscilla and Aquila, the former being the actual writer. This accounts for the suppression of the name. Professor A. S. Peake remarks: "While it can not be said that Harnack has proved his point, his identification seems to be the most probable that has yet been proposed."¹ But Professor Bruce concludes: "We must be content to remain in ignorance as to the writer of this remarkable work. . . . Was it not meet that he who tells us at the outset that God's last great word to men was spoken by his Son should disappear like a star in the presence of the great luminary of day?"

The question of the Church or community to which the Epistle was addressed is perhaps as difficult to determine as that of its author. As sound a supposition as any is made by Milligan, that it was destined for the Jewish Church in Rome, which had originated from those who heard the gospel at Pentecost, and had remained distinct from the larger Roman Church to which Paul wrote. The time, according to this writer, was 63 or 64 A. D., shortly before the persecution by Nero.¹ But the more common opinion would reverse the situation and have the Epistle sent from Italy, to Hebrew Christians in the coast regions of Palestine or Syria.² And in this case the probable date would be from 65 to 69 A. D., though some would place it after the destruction of Jerusalem from 70 to 80 A. D.

Contents.

Dr. Westcott was accustomed to say that the Epistle to the Hebrews was one of the two books of the Bible that had the most specific message for the difficulties of our own day.

STUDY XXX.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Heb. ii, 3.

Read Heb. i, ii. Note that the main theme of the Epistle is that the Christian religion is perfect and final, as a covenant relation established by God with man through his Son. In his opening words the writer strikes the keynote of all that follows in a contrast between the prophets and the Son through whom God has now spoken. The first comparison is between the Son and angels, to whom he is superior both in himself and in the glory to which he has been raised through humiliation in becoming man.

STUDY XXX.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Heb. iii, 3.

Read Heb. iii. After a short practical appeal to the Hebrew Christians not to neglect "so great salvation," the writer next shows that Christ is superior to Moses, and by another appeal points the readers to the true Sabbath rest.

Suggestions for Map Work and Scripture Outline.

As this Epistle shows the influence of Alexandrian ideas, draw a map and mark the course from Jerusalem to Alexandria by land, and from Alexandria to Cæsarea by water. See either map.

SCRIPTURE OUTLINE.—Theme: The finality of the Christian religion as mediated in God's Son, Heb. i, 1-4; The Son superior to angels, i, 5-ii; Also superior to Moses, iii, 1-6; Practical exhortation, iii, 7-iv, 13; The Son's glory as High Priest, introduced by exhortation, iv, 14-16; His qualifications for priesthood, v, 1-10; Renewed exhortation preparing for main truth, v, 11-vi; The Son an absolute High Priest after the order of Melchizedek, vii.

(Outline concluded in Study XXXI, Third Day.)

STUDY XXX.—Fourth Day. Memory Verses, Heb. iv, 9, 15.

Read Heb. iv. The exhortation respecting the true Sabbath rest is concluded and that added relating to Christ as our High Priest.

STUDY XXX.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Heb. v, 8.

Read Heb. v. The writer now gives the qualifications of all high priesthood, and shows that they are fulfilled in Christ, who has “learned obedience by the things which he suffered.” He then seeks to bring the hearers of his message to the stage where they can receive the “solid food” of doctrine.

STUDY XXX.—Sixth Day. Memory Verse, Heb. vi, 18.

Read Heb. vi. The appeal, continued in this chapter, is that the Hebrew Christians pass out of the “first principles of Christ, and press on unto perfection.” To those who revert to the old life the author holds out no hope of renewed repentance, since they “crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.” But he is “persuaded better things” of his readers, and desires that they be active and persevering, since God makes sure, even by an oath, their hope, which enters into that within the veil, whither as a forerunner Jesus has entered, “having become a high priest forever after the order of Melchizedek.”

Questions for Written Answers.

1. Give the names of writers of Epistles already reviewed, representing at least three different modes of thought.
2. Why is the Epistle to the Hebrews no longer assigned to Paul?
3. Give some points of contrast between this Epistle and Paul's writings.
4. Mention five persons who have been thought of as author of Hebrews.
5. To whom is Christ the Son shown in this Epistle to be superior?

STUDY XXX.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, Heb. vii, 25.

Read Heb. vii. The character and greatness of the priest king, Melchizedek, and the need of a priesthood of a higher order than the Levitical are presented, and it is shown that Christ meets all the conditions. "For such a high priest became us, holy, guileless, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens."

Personal Thought.

"Let us, therefore, draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace." Heb. iv, 6.

Those who have the most abundant privileges often make least use of them.

With what jealous interest would the high priest prize his right to enter once a year, with trembling, into the dread silence and darkness behind the veil. And do I, who can come at any moment, "with boldness, unto the throne of grace," make such use as I ought and as I need of my great right?

PART VII.—THIRTY-FIRST WEEK.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST AND THE FOUNDING OF
THE EARLY CHURCH GIVEN HIS-TORIC, WRITTEN FORM.

STUDY XXXI.—First Day. Memory Verse, Heb. ii, 3.

It is not easy for most readers to realize that until Oral Gospels. about the date now reached none of the written Gospels had appeared. Placed first in the New Testament, as it is familiarly known, they are almost unconsciously thought of as being first in time. But oral Gospels,¹ in the form of apostolic sermons or accounts of Christ's words and deeds, death and resurrection, were doubtless constantly used from the beginning, and by repetition would tend to assume fixity of outline. This body of narrative, in nearly the words first employed by the apostles as the original witnesses, would be repeated from one worker to another throughout the Churches, and become a common possession. But in time the need would become apparent of reducing these current narratives to permanent, written form. It is regarded by some as probable that the Epistles of Paul quickened this demand that the account of Christ's life should be written.

Thus arose our first three Gospels which seem to have Synoptic Gos- been accepted almost at once as having apostolic author- pels. ity. The course of events in these three Gospels is almost exactly the same, from the ministry of John the Baptist, with which Mark opens, onward, so they are called Synoptic Gospels. The Gospel of John is distinct, and will be considered later with his other writings.

Of the Synoptic Gospels, Mark is now regarded as Gospel of having been written first, and probably at Rome, shortly Mark. after Peter's death. It contains, in large degree, the substance of Peter's narrative of Christ's life in his sermons, as heard and remembered by John Mark. It is the Gospel of Deeds, graphic and chronological, and supplies the basis of events common to the Synoptic Gospels. It may safely be dated in the years 65-70 A. D.¹

Gospel of Matthew.

If it was given to Peter, through Mark, to leave to the Church for all time the simple, vivid, original Gospel of action, it was granted to Matthew to produce what has been termed "the most important book that has ever been written," the Gospel of our Lord's kingly majesty, great public discourses, and fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. Its immense value arises from the fact that it appears to reproduce most directly Christ's main doctrinal sayings or discourses, the logia. These may have been written by Matthew in Aramaic, thus accounting for the early tradition that his Gospel was written in Hebrew, which is not proven. This Gospel in Greek was probably written in Galilee or Syria in the years from 67 to 75 A. D., with its immediate aim, like that of the Epistle to the Hebrews, to confirm the wavering faith of Jewish Christians.²

Luke.

If Mark wrote the realistic Gospel and Matthew the Messianic, Luke composed what may be called the catholic Gospel, "the most beautiful book that has ever been written." Matthew is suggestive of the past and the Jews; Mark, of the present and the Romans; Luke, of the future and the race. It bears the impress of a historian, a man of literary and artistic temperament, a soul radiant with universal sympathy, in communion with Pauline ideals. Rome, Cæsarea, and Antioch have been thought of as favorable places for its preparation, but upon this there is no clear light. Its date ranges from 70 to 80 A. D.³

From Luke came the two longest writings of the New Testament. His Gospel is the most extended, and next to it is the Acts of the Apostles. The latter is also one of the first in importance. It is the chief authority, either within or without the Bible, for the founding of the Church and its early growth. "The first thirty years of Church life was a vast subject to take in hand, but Luke understood the true principle of dealing with it." He gathers the record around personalities—first, Peter, and, second, Paul—who are "represented as a pair of athletes wrestling on behalf of the Church." Altogether there are one hundred and ten persons named in its pages, and how distinctly each appears! Then how perfectly the entire record is welded together into one whole! "Without any jar or break from the small beginnings at Jerusalem we are led on, step by step, with increasing interest and enthusiasm, to the great climax of Paul at Rome."¹ If we ask for Luke's immediate motive in both writings, it may be that, in a time of growing persecution by the empire, he would exhibit the full spirit of Christianity, and show how, in earlier and happier years, at all points of trial, the State pronounced in its favor. The date of Acts is probably between 72 and 82 A. D.²

The production and historical place of the above-named writings are here given. The full treatment of their contents can be found in "Studies in the Life of Christ," and in Studies I-XXII of this textbook.

Read Heb. viii. The author indicates in this chapter the general condition under which Christ exercises his high-priestly ministry, as they fix the nature of the new covenant, which is finely pictured by a great passage from Jeremiah.¹

STUDY XXXI.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Heb. ix, 14.

Read Heb. ix. There are now given five points of contrast: First, as to the place of ministry, instead of the earthly tabernacle, Christ ministers in the heavenly; second, as to the offering, instead of animal life, it is his own life offered continuously, in his eternal spiritual estate; third, as to the power and effect of this offering, instead of only ceremonial cleanness, Christ's work produces a real cleansing of the conscience, and hallowing of the new covenant; fourth, as to the frequency of the offering, instead of being "year by year," it is "once" and forever.

THE CHURCH INSTRUCTED BY JOHN.

THIRTY-SECOND WEEK.

THE SEER ON PATMOS—MESSAGES TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

STUDY XXXII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Rev. i, 3.

Two leading apostles, Peter and Paul, both by their actions and writings, up to the point now reached, did most to give direction to early Church history. A third, the Apostle John, fills out the first century, and completes the period assigned to the Apostolic Church.

Three Apostolic Leaders.

John first appears in the opening chapter of the Gospel that bears his name as a disciple of John the Baptist. With Andrew and Peter, Philip and Nathanael, he follows Christ. At a later date, when our Lord began his Galilean ministry, he more formally called James and John; and these with Peter may be regarded as the inner circle of his apostles. As such, they enjoyed the special privilege of witnessing certain events. They were with Christ when Jairus's daughter was raised, and also on the Mount of Transfiguration and in the Garden of Gethsemane. James and John were so severe and intense in spirit that Jesus called them "Boanerges," or "Sons of thunder." Their mother, Salome, is regarded by many as a sister of Mary the mother of Christ, thus making them first cousins of their Master. This may explain why she asked Christ that her sons might sit on his right and left hand in his kingdom. They desired that fire be called down from heaven upon the unfriendly Samaritan village. But John, who was probably Christ's youngest apostle, became known as "the disciple whom Jesus loved," leaned on his breast at the last supper, and had committed to his care the mother of Christ at the crucifixion. He outran Peter on the way to the tomb, but stopped at the entrance, while his impetuous companion went in, when he followed. This shows that he was not the man to take the initiative, and in the Book of Acts it is "Peter and John" who healed the lame man at the Beautiful Gate, suffered arrest, and later visited Samaria to conserve the revival under Philip. Yet his future prominence in the Church was indicated in Christ's last interview with some of the apostles at the Sea of Galilee, and he is mentioned, Gal. ii, 9, among the "pillar" apostles, "who gave to me and Barnabas," says Paul, "the right hand of fellowship, that we should go unto the Gentiles, and they unto the circumcision." This agreement was not meant to be strictly and permanently binding; for the Lord had commanded the Twelve to go and make disciples of "all the nations." At what time John went to Ephesus is not known, but his presence and later ministry and influence in the province of Asia are well attested.¹ His closing years will be noticed in Study XXXV.

The Apostle John's Life.

Revelation of John.

The present view of scholars very generally places the Book of Revelation first among the Johannine writings, and holds that it was produced at Ephesus between 67 and 85 A. D.² It partakes of the nature of both a prophetic and an apocalyptic work, the messages to the seven Churches being in the mode of the former, and the remainder of the book in that of the latter; for prophecy sought chiefly to lead God's people to repentance by warning them of judgments, while apocalypses were designed to encourage them under tribulation by showing that judgments were approaching their enemies. The last named is the main service of this most peculiar New Testament book. It was a time of great trial to the Christian communities in the province of Asia and probably almost everywhere throughout the empire. The example of Nero's savage treatment of Christians at Rome would inspire a policy of attack upon them, and in many places Jewish hatred of the new sect would now find the officers of the State responsive to their vengeful purposes. It is evident that already at Smyrna and Philadelphia the Churches had suffered much from this source, and at Pergamum, Antipas and probably others had died "for the testimony of Jesus." At the same time the internal condition of the Churches called for searching admonition and rebuke. Worldliness was rife, subtle heresies were sapping the vigor of faith, and false leaders poisoning the springs of morals, so that some were "lukewarm" and others "dead" to the influences of a true and holy gospel.

Let us keep in mind the intensely practical purpose of this book. The curious speculations of many concerning its meaning are in contrast to the vehemently earnest and pressing message intended to be conveyed by the writer.

STUDY XXXII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Rev. i, 6.

Read Rev. i. In the original the first word is "Apocalypse." And it is the Apocalypse or Revelation "of Jesus Christ." This is the notable and impressive feature of the book. From beginning to end Christ is Divine, supreme, all-conquering. His redemptive work is also exalted. Note how it begins to find expression in this chapter in ver. 5, 7, 18. See also v, 6, 13; vii, 14; xiii, 8.

STUDY XXXII.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Rev. ii, 7.

Read Rev. ii, 1-11. The first message or letter is to the Church at Ephesus, the chief city of the province, where St. John resided. An early conjecture assigns the origin of the sect of the Nicolaitans to Nicolas mentioned in Acts vi, 5, but has not much weight of authority. Smyrna alone of the seven cities flourishes to-day. Its Church was wholly commended.

PART VIII.—THIRTY-THIRD WEEK.

THE WARFARE OF GOOD AND EVIL.

STUDY XXXIII.—First Day. Memory Verse, Rev.

The central portion of John's Apocalypse, or chapters iv—xx, forms a vast panorama of visions and symbols, from which one clear fact emerges,—it is a picture or representation of conflict between good and evil. Let the reader or student fix upon this fact as the key to the chief message of this portion of the book, and whatever else may be obscure his effort to grasp the meaning of that which is written will not be fruitless; for the issue of this conflict is the supreme triumph of good.

A Central Fact.

This part of the Apocalypse has a terrible and sanguinary background of history, dark with wickedness and crime, and deeply stained with blood, during the later years of Nero's reign, the Jewish revolt against Rome, and the destruction of Jerusalem. The peace and security of to-day make it impossible to conceive of such scenes of violence and misery as almost filled the world at that time. Farrar says concerning the Apocalypse: "We must read it by the lurid light of the bale-fires of martyrdom. We must try to feel as Christians felt when they saw their brethren torn by the wild beasts of the amphitheater, or standing as living torches, each in his pitchy tunic, on one ghastly night at Rome. Such a book was needed when men saw an Antichrist, a wicked human god, sitting absolute, and slavishly adored, upon the throne of the civilized world; or holding foul orgies in the streets of the mystic Babylon, red with the blood of the martyrs of the Lord. It was written in days of earthquakes, and inundations, and volcanic outbursts, and horrible prodigies. Emperor after emperor was perishing by poison, suicide, or slaughter. Alike Rome and Jerusalem had been deluged with massacre. At such an hour—perhaps the dimmest and most disastrous which ever fell upon an afflicted world—the Seer still prophesies triumphantly of the coming dawn. It shows us the struggle of good and evil, of light and darkness. There is God and Satan; there is the Harlot City and the New Jerusalem; there is Michael and the Dragon; there is heaven and the abyss; there are the armies of the saints and the armies of the idolaters.”¹

Background.

Message Concealed.

It is stated, Rev. i, 9, that the writer “was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus.” This is rightly understood as meaning John’s banishment to the island because of his preaching,² and has variously been placed in the reigns of Nero, Vespasian, and Domitian. Whenever it occurred, it is an added mark of the hostility of the empire to the Christian cause. Thus the very form and mode of expression of the Apocalypse may spring in part from the necessity of concealing its message from the officers and spies of the government. John wrote in parable and symbol that reading they might not understand. And so it happens that later generations have not understood, and even now to the mass of Christians the Revelation is a sealed book. It doubtless brought wondrous cheer to Christ’s flock then, and it still has the same comfort for all who go beyond its figurative language and find its underlying truth.

Principles Given,
Not Distant Events.

“The object of the book is to nerve the trembling faith of the Asian Churches in the first place, and through these the whole Church, to face the strain of the present, and the probable agony of the immediate future.”³

“Hardly any book in the New Testament is so relative to the age that saw its birth, and less looks toward or is adapted to the distant future.”¹ “It is a representation in which an idea, not the time needed for the expression of the idea, plays the chief part. While the Apocalypse embraces the whole period of the Christian dispensation it sets before us within this period the action of great principles and not special incidents. In this respect it follows closely the lines of our Lord’s last discourse in the three earlier Gospels.”² In its opening sentences the book itself declares that “the time is at hand” and that through this revelation God enables John to show “the things which must shortly come to pass.”

It is not possible to determine the exact time when the Apocalypse was written. Most agree that it was after John left Patmos, for he says, Rev. i, 9, “I was in the isle.” The most probable date is in the reign of Vespasian, and about 77 A. D.³ Date.

To the modern reader it is far more important to get the general impression of the Book of Revelation than the specific interpretation of the various symbolical representations.

STUDY XXXIII.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Rev. v, 9.

first part of chapter vii, which forms an interlude, the saved compose a definite number, are sealed "on their foreheads," and assigned to the twelve tribes of Israel; in the latter part the unnumbered multitude of the saved are disclosed in perfect purity and joy. The one section may suggest Old Testament limitation, the other the unbounded fullness of gospel salvation. Chapter viii notes the solemn hush of heaven at the opening of the seventh seal, which completes one series, by developing another of seven trumpets.

Personal Thought. ^

"And many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter." Rev. viii, 11.

A chief part of the Christian's fight to-day must be against the "bitter waters" brought into human life by intoxicants and narcotics. The Greek term in this verse for "wormwood" is almost exactly the same as "absinthe," the name of one of these deadly drinks cursing the world. But the warfare against these foes is not to cease until they are forever overthrown. Are you in the ranks against them?

PART VIII.—THIRTY-FOURTH WEEK.

THE ETERNAL CITY AND SONG.

STUDY XXXIV.—First Day. Memory Verse, Rev. xvii, 14.

The feature of the Apocalypse of John, which gives it power to comfort and inspire, is that it glorifies Christ, and declares that he shall be finally and forever victorious over all evil. If the keynote of the previous Study was war, that of the present one is victory and peace.

Christ Victorious over Evil.

Conflict is the inevitable experience of the Church, and of every genuine Christian, in this age as really as it was in the first century. Truth can never be at peace with error, holiness with sin, Christ with Satan. The Apocalypse discloses the great principle of the cross for every disciple. If John's Gospel is the manifestation of Christ's martyrdom, the Apocalypse is the revelation of the martyrdom of his followers. The writer "knew no Christianity that does not, in one way or another, conduct the believer through tears and blood, through suffering and the cross, to the heavenly reward."¹

The Cross and Martyrdom.

But, if the Christian has conflict, he has also divine preservation in the midst of the strife, and shares in the triumph and dominion of his Lord. This thought occurs again and again in the New Testament. Says Jesus, "Ye are they that have continued with me in my temptations; and I appoint unto you a kingdom, even as my Father appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom; and ye shall sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."² Again, Paul writes to Timothy, "If we endure, we shall also reign with him."³ This, therefore, may explain the difficulty connected with the "resurrections" of Rev. xx. John views all believers as martyrs; for if not among those "be-headed," they are such as "worshipped not the beast, neither his image, and received not the mark upon their forehead and upon their hand," ver. 4. Both the statement that they "lived" and that they "reigned with Christ a thousand years" appear to be symbolic expressions of their triumph, the same as the first clause of the verse, "I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them." The "second resurrection," so called, of ver. 12, 13, is also symbolic, and the resurrection of the unrighteous,¹ but neither the first nor the second of these apocalyptic resurrections chronicles the actual final resurrection. They point to the fact of final resurrection, but do not give the form. They reveal the certain triumph of the righteous and overthrow of wicked men and evil powers. The binding, loosing, and ultimate casting of Satan into the lake of fire² suggests stages in Christ's overcoming of his adversary. They probably do not give the history of the end of his kingdom, but the last symbol assures us that the devil's sway will most surely find its end.

A Redeemed Society and Fellowship of Praise.

In like manner John's vision of "the bride, the wife of the Lamb . . . the holy city Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God,"³ or his hearing "as it were the voice of a great multitude . . . saying, Hallelujah: for the Lord our God, the Almighty, reigneth. Let us rejoice and be exceeding glad, and let us give glory unto him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come,"⁴ may be the conclusions of a message too great to be compressed into any language of earth; but they are eloquent of a glorious reality that is here and now, as well as in the future, an eternal city and song, a redeemed society and fellowship of praise, in Christ and unto Christ, for evermore.

“It is this which gives the Apocalypse its place at the close and climax of the New Testament; this which gives it its place in the heart of Christ’s disciples. It describes, as no other book does, the glory of our ascended Lord, and the triumphant issue of his conflict with evil; the pictures which it draws of heaven and those who dwell there, of the new life where ‘there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain,’ commend themselves to the Christian heart, not alone for their intrinsic beauty, but because Christ is so plainly set forth as the Lord of that life, and his sacrifice as the way by which men attain unto it.”¹

In the Book of Revelation we have illustrated a well-nigh universal characteristic of Biblical prophecy. The prophets are all pessimists as to present conditions, but invincible optimists as to the final outcome.

STUDY XXXIV.—Second Day. Memory Verse, Rev. xvii, 15.

Read Rev. xvii. Nearly all writers apply the language of this chapter to Rome,² but some regard it as descriptive of apostate Jerusalem.³

STUDY XXXIV.—Third Day. Memory Verse, Rev. xviii, 24.

Read Rev. xviii. This chapter is rightly esteemed as one of the most remarkable descriptive passages of the Bible.

STUDY XXXIV.—Fifth Day. Memory Verse, Rev. xx, 15.

Read Rev. xx. Of three great enemies, two, the beast and the false prophet, have been overcome in the last chapter. The "false prophet" probably means the priesthood cultivating Cæsar-worship. The power of the third enemy, Satan, is represented in ver. 1-3, as broken, and he is restrained, and afterward, ver. 10, utterly overwhelmed. Yet, as suggested in the Narrative, the figurative language is not to be taken numerically, but as giving the fact of his overthrow by Christ, and that it proceeds by stages, of which these are only symbolic indications.

PART VIII.—THIRTY-FIFTH WEEK.

SAINTLY AGE AT EPHESUS—GOD IS LIGHT,
GOD IS LOVE.

STUDY XXXV.—First Day. Memory Verse, 1 John i, 3.

Very beautiful are the accounts that have come down from later writers concerning St. John's saintly character and words and deeds in his apostolic ministry and serene old age at Ephesus. Some of these are plainly legendary, while others are so in keeping with what is known of him in the New Testament that they may be accepted, at least as filling out the ideal of a life of stainless purity and unremitting devotion and love. A touching story is told by Clement of Alexandria of his reclaiming a youth who had been converted to the faith, but had fallen into evil ways and joined a band of robbers, even becoming their chief. When St. John again visited the city where he had committed the soul of this young man to the care of the bishop, and learned of what had occurred, he instantly left the Church, in his habit as he was, and, arriving at the brigands' outpost, permitted himself to be captured, that he might be led to their chief. At sight of the apostle the young man fled, but John with swifter feet pursued and overtook him, and with entreaties and prayers won him back to Christ. More familiarly known is the relation by Jerome of how the venerable man, too old to walk, would be carried into the church, and used constantly to address his flock with the words, "Little children, love one another." When they, impatient at this repetition, asked for something new, he replied, "That precept of the Lord suffices for you." Thus in serenity and peace he fell asleep about the close of the first century, with which his life had largely run parallel.

John's Closing Years.

“If St. John really lived till the time of Trajan—that is, till about A. D. 100—there is no reason why Polycarp should not have known him.”¹

Date of John's Epistles and Gospel.

In referring to the closing chapter of the Fourth Gospel, Bartlet,² observes: “This would point to a time somewhere about 90, when John would be hardly less than eighty years of age. Putting the Gospel, then, about 85–90 A. D., one would put the Epistles a little earlier.” “It is not quite certain which of the two books was written earlier; probably they were written about the same time, so that an approximate date, A. D. 90–100, if accepted for the Gospel, will also hold good for the Epistle.”³ These statements give the general idea of many scholars as to about the date of these writings.

First John.

So fully does the First Epistle of John belong to the General Epistles that it has no salutation nor any personal allusion. The name of John is not mentioned, and there is no indication of those for whom the letter was intended. Yet it is easy to perceive in the Epistle the writer of the Gospel. It not only has the same type of words and phrases, but similar deep and spiritual thoughts. “It is really a manual of Christian ethics, the answer of Christianity to the question which has been asked by the wisest heathens, ‘What is the true end and object of man, and how can it be obtained?’ St. John answers, ‘It is to be found in the Word of Life, in the only begotten Son, who has brought union with the Eternal within our reach.’”⁴ New forms of heresy have sprung up, under the lead of Cerinthus and others, who either taught that all matter is evil, and therefore the body of Christ was a mere seeming, not a reality, or else taught that the Divine nature could not enter into his sufferings in the atonement, and that Christ was separated from the man Jesus before he was crucified.⁵ John powerfully confutes these errors, as he was best fitted to do of all men then living, because of his personal knowledge of Christ.

John's Second and Third Epistles are classed in date and general circumstances with the First, but are very brief. The Third letter, at ver. 9, has a reference to another writing, which is thought to be the Second Epistle.¹ Both shed much light upon the way in which life and belief were developing, for the Second letter is probably to a Church under the title of "the elect lady." Diotrefes, the chief pastor or "bishop" of this Church, appears to sympathize with the doctrines which John opposes, so that the situation resembles that of Paul and the Corinthian Church when Second Corinthians was written.²

Second and Third John.

Probably with the writing of John's Gospel the canonical books of the New Testament were completed, and the crowning element of Apostolic Church life was supplied. It declares its purpose more fully than do the synoptic writers, and reveals in its whole structure that it was prepared, as John says, "that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name."³ And this may well be the aim of every writing relating to God and his Holy Word.

Writing of John's Gospel.

It will help us to understand the Epistles of John, if we remember that they were addressed to an age that had begun to refine away the simple historical facts of Christ's life, and to substitute a pretentious philosophical profundity for the elementary Christian virtues.

‘We have never sinned,’ we make him out false—since he has revealed himself as a redeeming God. Yet while none is impeccable, sin is no dire necessity. John’s very object in writing is to teach the secret of exemption from sin. To abide in Him is to overcome sin. There is infinite power in the bearing away of sin by the sinless Lamb.”¹

STUDY XXXV.—Third Day. Memory Verses, 1 John iii, 2, 3.

Read 1 John iii. Note that John lays stress upon the point that “we are” the children of God, ver. 1. It is not a figure of speech, but a fact of our spiritual nature. And the hope of becoming more fully like Christ, should lead each to purify himself. In ver. 6, 9, John asserts, that, in its essence, this new life is the very opposite of sin, and goes on to show that it is love revealing itself in practical deeds.

Questions for Written Answers.

1. What terms may be used to describe John's closing years?
2. Give about the date of the writing of John's Epistles and Gospel.
3. What two expressions or truths may be said to give direction to the thought of the First Epistle of John?
4. Is the Second Epistle of John written to an individual or to a Church?
5. What is the purpose for which the Gospel of John was written?

STUDY XXXV.—Seventh Day. Memory Verse, 3 John, 11.

Read 3 John. "The great interest of this Epistle lies in the insight which it gives into the ordinary life of the Christian communities of those early times and this wide Asiatic territory. It places us at the point of transition from the apostolic age to the post-apostolic."¹ At this point, therefore, the study of the Apostolic Church appropriately closes.

Personal Thought.

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another." 1 John iv, 11.

It is well that the last great word of God's long course of disclosure of his feeling and thought toward man, as given in the Bible, should be that of John's Epistle and Gospel, "God so loved."

What should be our first and last thought and feeling toward God and toward one another?

Read 1 John iv, 19.
